Fire-scarred North Isle makes it back to port

FIVE ESCAPE INJURY

Five commercial fishermen escaped serious injury when fire gutted the interior of a 68-foot seiner on its way out from the Inner Harbor shortly after 8 a.m. today.

Owner David Houston of Delta said the North Isle, valued at $90,000, would have been a write-off had the incident happened away from fire-fighting tugs and other equipment.

Houston was asleep in his bunk when he smelled smoke.

Rushing to the engine room, he opened a companionway door. An explosion followed.

He escaped with slight burns, the flames singeing his hair and arms.

Within minutes fire-fighting tugs were at the scene, smothering the flames that gutted the cabin and engine room as the seiner's crew took to a skiff.

Houston was unable to give an estimate of the damage to city fire officials but reported he had lost radar, depth sounder and other electronic gear.

Houston was still unsure of how the explosion was triggered.

He has owned the boat jointly with B.C. Packers for two years.

Nixon Gives Up His Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon gave up today his fight to keep his Watergate tapes secret and agreed to turn them over to a federal judge.

The president's constitutional lawyer, Charles Alan Wright, told Judge John Sirica that the president as late as Monday had not intended to surrender his tapes but had changed his mind.

"There would have been those who would have said the president was defying the law," Wright said in Sirica's hushed courtroom. "But this president does not defy the law."

Wright told Sirica that Nixon had hoped that the proposed compromise he had announced Friday night seeking to avert a constiutional crisis over the tapes issue would have satisfied two court orders that he make the tapes available to Sirica for screening for the Watergate grand jury.

"We had hoped that this kind of solution would end the constitutional crisis," Wright said. "But events over the weekend made it very apparent that it would not."

The "events" to which Wright referred was a furor — including efforts by some congressmen to start impeachment proceedings against Nixon — after he fired Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor.

The House of Representatives today began preliminary inquiries into whether President Nixon should be impeached.

House Speaker Carl Albert sent the judiciary committee all impeachment resolutions. The committee's chairman, Representative Peter Rodino (Dem., N.J.) said: "Events of the past few days leave us with little choice at this time but to move ahead with preparation for impeachment proceedings."

Albert cautioned against any hasty or reckless action.

Rodino described his committee's task as being "the preliminary stage to inquire whether or not there is evidence to establish an impeachable offence."

$180M For Land

EDMONTON (CP) — A land development program that would be attractive to municipalities and remove some of their concerns about the financing of new residential development was suggested by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford Monday.

Basford said that $180 million is available under existing legislation for land assembly and the new communities program in the next 14 months.

"If we can work together, I believe we would create substantially more publicly-developed serviced land," he told more than 200 delegates representing the federal, provincial and municipal levels of government.

$1 BILLION FUND

Earlier, the municipal delegation to the conference had urged in a brief that a $1-billion community development fund be set up by the federal government for land banking and experimental housing projects.

The municipalities said in a brief Monday that the money would be in addition to current federal spending on existing programs under the National Housing Act.

The municipal group suggested that the federal government could use the money to buy land directly for housing and community development. The land acquisition would have to fit in with provincially-approved municipal plans.

GUIDELINES

Basford proposed that land assembly funds would be applied on a priority basis to public projects adhering to the following guidelines:

—When land is sold or leased, the participating governments would put the profits back into the project at no cost to the municipality in land for open space, community facilities and school sites. Any remaining profit would be applied to the capital cost of community service buildings.

—A portion of the land would be made available free of charge for public housing.

—Prices for the sale or leasing of land for modest-income housing would be at, or close to, cost. Prices for more expensive units would be close to market rates.

—Provinces and municipalities would be allowed to defer interest on federal land assembly loans until the land is marketed.

Basford emphasized that the program could be achieved within existing legislation.

"If we are going to be in the land development business, we should be setting the example for the private sector, not simply imitating their methods," Basford said. Hopefully, we will break the financial bottleneck that has restrained municipalities from opening up land and establish a style and method of development to which all private developers in the country would be obliged to conform."

He urged delegates to have the appropriate officials at each level of government ex-

LE DUC THO, a member of the North Vietnamese politburo, today rejected the Nobel Peace Prize awarded to him jointly with U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger, a Hanoi broadcast said.

In his message to the Nobel committee Tho said: "I feel it impossible to accept the 1973 Nobel Peace Prize" because the United States and the South Vietnamese regime have continued to commit "very serious violations" of the ceasefire agreement and "peace has not been really restored in South Vietnam."

BCR Men Defiant

The leader of striking shopcraft unions at B.C. Rail said today the men won't go back to work in response to a call from Premier Barrett, who is also president of B.C. Rail.

Barrett sent a telegram Monday afternoon asking the men to return by 1 p.m. today, saying "the economic situation in B.C. compels me to make this request of you today." He didn't say what will happen if there was no return to work by 1 p.m.

Asked by reporters this morning if the government planned to introduce back to work legislation today, he said only "no comment."

Norman Farley, chairman of the four-union negotiating committee of 383 men who repair railway equipment, said, "they are not even sure what is the situation created by the strike."

He said B.C. Rail was shut down by a strike in 1966 for three weeks while the present strike has lasted only nine days.

"I haven't found that the public is beefing. They are not hitting the hotlines or the editorials," Farley said from Vancouver.

He said the strikers are "not asking for sympathetic handouts or charitable donations" but over the years the employees had "fallen behind" in wages and it was time to catch up.

He said no negotiations have been arranged and the four striking unions were meeting with top officers of the B.C. Federation of Labor to "map strategy."

Barrett, in his telegram, said "there is no doubt in my mind that your economic situation has been neglected for many years past, however, no new government can make up overnight for many years of neglect."

Mideast Battles Raging Again

Times News Services

Fierce tank and artillery clashes exploded along the Suez Canal today and dog-fights erupted over the Syrian battleground.

The war raged into its 18th day on both fronts after an only partial overnight pause for the precarious Security Council truce designed to halt the combat in place and open the way to negotiations for a permanent peace.

Israel's renewed offensive in Egypt sent spearheads to within 37 miles of Cairo but the Egyptians said only that heavy fighting had broken out and that Israel started it.

Egypt called for an emergency Security Council meeting to discuss what it said were Israeli violations of the fragile ceasefire. Council president Sir Laurence McIntyre of Australia called a midday session at UN headquarters in New York.

Egypt and Israel had accepted the truce appeal worked out by the United States and the Soviet Union and both ordered their armies Monday evening to hold their fire unless fired on.

But Syria kept silent on the UN call, and only hours after it went into effect there were mutual accusations of ceasefire violations by Egyptians and Israelis along the Suez front.

A correspondent for Egypt's Middle East News Agency said the Israeli and Egyptian forces by today were "locked in the most vicious fighting since the outbreak of the war."

Syria charged the Israelis sent about 60 planes in "waves" to bomb civilian targets today north of Damascus and said Israeli planes and cannons hit villages in the eastern foothills of Mount Hermon.

The renewed fighting cast doubt on whether the ceasefire call can bring a quick halt to the fourth Middle East war despite the apparent agreement between U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger and Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev.

Egypt said the Israelis grabbed new positions during the night, particularly in efforts to expand the Israeli foothold on the west bank of the canal.

Meanwhile, should the fighting end, 30 Canadian soldiers are ready to go to the Middle East immediately if they are needed to bolster United Nations truce observer forces there, an armed forces spokesman said Monday in Ottawa.

At the U.N., diplomats worked today on plans for policing any ceasefire, with support growing for use of U.S. and Soviet troops.

The only hitch was China.

Diplomats report increasing backing to suggestions that Moscow and Washington send units to serve side-by-side in an unprecedented tour of duty as truce policemen.

But Chinese ambassador Huang Hua accused the "two superpowers" of seeking to perpetuate a "no peace-no war" situation in the Middle East in their joint ceasefire resolution approved Monday.

It is likely that China will veto any plan to send Soviet and U.S. troops into the Middle East, sources say.

Israel 'On Top'

WASHINGTON (WP) — Military analysts expressed the view Monday that Israeli forces hold the upper hand in the Suez Canal area and can trap or destroy a large part of the Egyptian army if the fighting continues for another week.

Officials here estimate the Israelis now hold close to 500 square miles of territory on the Egyptian side of the canal.

But more importantly, these sources said the fast-moving Israeli armored units had cut the only railroad and highway links between Ismailia and Cairo in the central canal area and the sole rail and road link between Cairo and Port Suez on the southern end of the canal.

The Israeli armored units operating on the West Bank have knocked out many of the Russian-supplied surface-to-air missile batteries, thus giving the Israeli air force a fairly clear shot at much of the Egyptian armor left on the East Bank.

Despite the fact that Egyptian forces still hold a roughly five-mile deep beachhead along much of the East Bank, many U.S. military men here feel Israel clearly has gained the edge.

"Strategically," one officer said, "Israel has it all over them."

$1-a-Gallon Gas on Way?

Times News Services

Dollar-a-gallon gasoline in British Columbia is a possibility because of the rising price of world crude oil, B.C. Energy Commission chairman James Rhodes said Monday in Vancouver.

He told the annual convention of B.C. Automotive Dealers Association the price of imported crude oil has risen from between $2 and $3 to above $6 a barrel and could go to $10.

The energy commission's intention "is to assure an adequate supply of petroleum for B.C." Rhodes said, adding it would be no easy task because this province produces only 50 per cent of the petroleum it consumes and there is no evidence of any great amount of undiscovered deposits of oil.

He said the energy commission, in its detailed look at the petroleum industry ordered by the cabinet last week, will examine present and future oil demands and prices, look for measures to guarantee adequate supplies, and for other measures that will assure fair prices.

In Alberta, the government has threatened to take greater control over its shipments of oil to the rest of Canada and the world.

The action, described in the legislature as an Alberta-first policy, would be the latest move in Alberta's fight with the federal government to control its oil resources.

Bill Dickie, provincial minister of mines and minerals, said Monday the move "being looked at in the light of recent events" is an act giving the province the power to determine how much crude oil could be sold outside Alberta.

United States energy adviser John Love, appointed by President Nixon two weeks ago, is meeting Canadian Energy Minister Donald Macdonald today in Ottawa to discuss a growing list of Canada-United States energy problems.

It is the first meeting between the two men and their talks will cover a variety of thorny issues precipitated by changing Canadian energy policies.

The list includes:

—The 40 cents-a-barrel crude oil export tax that annoyed U.S. officials when announced last month without advance consultation.

—Possible cutback in Canadian natural gas exports to protect B.C. consumers from winter shortages.

—Ottawa's proposed extension of the interprovincial pipeline to Montreal. This would reduce Quebec and Atlantic reliance on imported oil from Venezuela and the Middle East and could lead to cutbacks in Canadian oil exports to the U.S.

—Canada's possible retreat from an earlier commitment to supply north western U.S.

MLA BROUSSON QUITS

Brousson, first elected in a 1968 byelection, rose in his place as the house was about to adjourn at 6 p.m. Monday and told his colleagues he is no longer able to continue as both an MLA and a businessman and was therefore resigning.

Premier Barrett said Brousson's announcement had to be regarded with "shock and regret" but that the role of the modern MLA has been changing to that of a full-time position.

The premier said Brousson's decision is "regrettable" but said the new system of governing has caught up with B.C.

Brousson's departure leaves the Liberal party with only four members in the legislature. The NDP government has 38, Social Credit 10 and the Progressive Conservatives 2.

Brousson, whose heating and refrigeration wholesale and distributing business was recently acquired by a larger firm, said he has been finding his business duties and oppor-

Import Duties On Oil Dropped

OTTAWA (CP) — All import duties on gasoline, light heating oils, diesel fuel, aviation fuel and feedstocks for petrochemical industries will be abolished Wednesday, Finance Minister John Turner announced today in the Commons.

"This action is being taken to offset rising prices for petroleum products," the minister said in tabling the ways and means motion that accompanies any tax change.

DST... Energy Saver for B.C.?

Year-round daylight saving time, a fuel-saver during the First and Second World Wars, may offer some relief for B.C. in the face of possible energy shortages.

"That's a very interesting idea," Premier Barrett said Monday, when asked his opinion of the suggestion. He said he would take it up with Resources Minister Bob Williams.

The logic behind permanent summer time is simple: longer hours of daylight would cut the use of electrical energy needed for lighting homes, offices and streets.

Clocks are usually turned ahead in the spring and back again in the fall by cabinet order-in-council. DST is scheduled to end next Sunday.

Opposition members expressed interest in the idea Monday and most said it would be an easy way to conserve fuel.

Bill Bennett (SC—South Okanagan) said he didn't think the hour change would inconvenience anyone, including farmers in his own constituency.

Most farmers are working under lights early in the morning anyway, he said.

Liberal leader David Anderson said it was an excellent idea but would be most effective only if done in consultation with other jurisdictions. The peak load factor is important, he said, and the load should be staggered in relation to Seattle for example.

The extra hour of daylight has found some support in the U.S. where the transportation department, which enforces

Profit Goes 'Missing'

TORONTO (CP) — A survey of five major food chains here has indicated the retail price of beef has dropped only 10 per cent since late August while the wholesale price has decreased about 17 per cent in the same period.

Federal department of agriculture figures show Toronto supermarket chains saw their cost of beef carcasses drop to $82.65 a hundredweight last week from $100.22 Aug. 29.

However, the survey noted the retail weighted average cost of a beef cut dropped only to $1.36 from $1.46 a pound in the same period.

And the Canadian Cattlemen's Association is concerned about the discrepancy.

Charles Gracey, association president, said retail prices were resulting in lower consumption as the number of animals on farms increases.

Supermarket spokesmen say most of the extra margin since August has gone toward restoring profits lost when wholesale beef prices hit record highs last summer.

points in uncertain reaction to calls for President Nixon's impeachment and continued fighting in the Middle East, but rallied before the close to 5.95 points below Monday's close.

Five House members earlier pledged to introduce impeachment motions when the congressional session resumed.

Albert met for 3½ hours Monday with some of the leaders and tentatively agreed that the House judiciary committee should start a preliminary investigation of impeachment.

Such an investigation would be just short of a formal proceeding leading toward removal of the president from office, but would stall any attempt to force the House into an immediate vote on impeachment.

Under the Constitution, the House must first approve impeachment by majority vote. The Senate must then approve the action by a two-thirds majority after sitting as a "jury" under the chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Law experts admit that if the president chooses to fight the case in the Senate, his lawyers could stretch the proceedings out for many months by legal manoeuvring.

The legal experts also point to the argument that the president's best personal interests might direct that course. The only penalty of a successful impeachment proceeding is removal from office. Prosecution by criminal indictment afterwards is possible but scarcely likely, they say, in the wake of such massive disgrace.

If the president were to resign prior to impeachment though, he would be more likely to be targeted for criminal investigation, they contend. Requesting not to be named, one legal expert said, "the premium for toughing it out successfully is good all round."

Meanwhile, the Senate Watergate committee denied that it has made any special deal with the president and returned to the court seeking full disclosure of White House tape recordings dealing with the Watergate political bugging scandal.

The committee asked the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to reverse a lower court ruling that the committee has no legal authority to sue for the tapes.

U.S. District Judge John Sirica told two federal grand juries, both investigating Watergate and related scandals, that they are still in business despite the Cox firing. He said only he can dismiss the jurors.

Nixon, remaining silent over the tapes controversy, returned from an overnight stay at his mountain retreat at Camp David, Md., and conferred with State Secretary Henry Kissinger on the Middle East crisis.

He was described by his daughter, Julie Eisenhower, as being in good shape: "There is no depression. There is no despair."

The president's popularity was apparently at a low ebb, however. An NBC-sponsored poll gave Nixon a 75-per-cent "unfavorable" rating, with 44 per cent of those polled favoring impeachment — twice the August figure. Nearly half said he should resign.

An Associated Press sampling of sentiment in the House showed that 48 members — most of them Democrats — are willing at least to consider impeachment proceedings against Nixon.

There are 435 members of the House. Impeachment requires 218 votes.

The Senate Watergate committee scheduled a meeting for Thursday. Meanwhile, the Senate judiciary committee planned to meet Wednesday in closed session to discuss the firing of Cox.

Several Democrats on the judiciary committee pressed for open hearings. One of them, Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, said he wanted the committee to investigate whether the tapes dispute was a pretext for firing Cox because "he was too hot on the White House trail."

Cox's refusal to compromise on the tapes issue received support from Senator Sam Ervin, chairman of the Senate Watergate committee. Ervin said: "I would have done exactly like Cox did."

The news was generally bad for Nixon from all fronts Monday.

An exception was the support offered by Senator Barry Goldwater, Republican presidential nominee in 1964. He said he couldn't imagine either the House or Senate impeaching Nixon on the basis of Cox's dismissal.

road cut-offs, "they have control of two or three airfields and probably will destroy (the Egyptian force) or force a surrender in a week."

Though the numbers were never very precise, the size of the Egyptian armies that crossed into Israeli-occupied Sinai was estimated at between 70,000 to possibly 100,000 men and 1,000 tanks.

Monday, officials offered rough estimates that the force had dropped to between 60,000 and 70,000 men.

This reflected both Egyptian casualties and some recent movement of Cairo's soldiers — some in disarray — back across the Canal north of Ismailia and in the south as well.

Egyptian tank and armored vehicle losses on the East Bank have been put at about half the original 1,000-vehicle force.

Fortifying the opinion that Israel holds the upper hand, as military men here view it, is the fact that Israel has only started moving sizable amounts of armor and infantry from the Syrian front on the weekend and that the Sinai forces have not yet been fully reinforced.

The Israeli force operating inside Egypt now is estimated at about 500 tanks and 15,000 men, according to reports reaching the Pentagon.

Currently, casualty estimates available here indicate some 15,000-17,000 killed and wounded among the combined Arab forces, and 3,500-4,000 Israeli casualties, killed or wounded.

tunities escalating. At the same time, he said, his duties as an MLA have also been increasing.

He said he is choosing his business career over politics because "that is where I believe I can make my greatest personal contribution."

Barrett had no comment to make on when a byelection would be held, saying the announcement was the first indication he had had of Brousson's intention.

It is expected, however, that the government will move quickly to have the seat filled.

The registration leaves the way open for a number of aspiring politicians who are after a seat in the House.

Progressive Conservative party president Peter Hyndman, rumored to be interested in seeking the party's leadership, ran a strong second to Liberal Allan Williams in the West Vancouver-Howe Sound riding in the 1972 election.

A number of candidates for the leadership of the Social Credit party, to be decided in a Vancouver convention next month, will also likely be interested in the seat.

They include former Social Credit cabinet minister Phil Gaglardi, considered to be a strong contender for the Socred leadership if he decides to run.

Brousson told reporters he had been reading press reports of the legislative session since his return last week from a month-long business tour of Europe and had decided that there was no real justification for the government calling a fall session.

The government, however, is committed to a policy of two sessions per year and has raised MLAs' salaries in order to allow them to make their legislative jobs full-time positions.

Was Shooting of Wallace Plumbers' Plan?—Ellsberg

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Daniel Ellsberg has called for an investigation into the possibility the White House "plumbers" engineered the shooting of Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

Ellsberg said some of the "plumbers" including Howard Hunt were "professional managers of assassination" and they felt Wallace's not running for president in 1972 was "crucial to their success."

He said he was calling for a re-examination of the shooting "knowing now what the (President) Nixon team was prepared to do to help his election."

Ellsberg, acquitted on charges arising out of his release of the Pentagon Papers while working for Rand Corp., discussed Wallace's attack in a lengthy interview with the magazine Rolling Stone on the newstands today.

The former government intelligence analyst also criticized Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, awarded the 1973 Nobel Peace Price with North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho for negotiating a settlement of the Vietnam war.

Kissinger, according to Ellsberg, was "perceived as a peacemaker, as a lovable wit, a charming fellow, as anything but the murderous creep that he obviously is" for his part in the U.S. bombing of Indochina.

Ellsberg also said Kissinger was "more probably responsible for instigating" the creation of the White House "plumbers unit" than former Nixon aide John Ehrlichman.

"They shouldn't build cars that self-destruct merely on impact!"

amine tax policies to see how they might be modified to better serve the objectives of properly-managed urban growth. Basford cited the example of land no longer being farmed, which is suitable for residential development, and being taxed as farm land.

The urban affairs minister also proposed to increase federally-supported research aimed at producing new technology to reduce the costs of servicing land. Municipalities had expressed concern about the high costs of servicing.

Land development plans are aimed at curbing increased land costs by assembling large blocks of cheap land for rapid development. Federal officials have complained about hte poor response to such proposals.

Basford also proposed an expansion of the federal sewage treatment assistance program through new legislation.

The government proposes to include within the sewage treatment scheme assistance for trunk sewers for storm water where they are used to create new development. This would help increase the supply of serviced land and affect lot prices.

Additional assistance was also suggested for small towns that face high per capita costs for installing sewage systems.

Basford also announced the maximum National Housing Act loan level of $30,000 has been extended to include a wider range of housing.

Existing single-family dwellings now will qualify for the maximum $30,000 loan. The previous limit for such homes was $23,000.

The higher loan limit will also apply to new and existing multiple housing under co-operative and condominium arrangements, the minister said.

The minister said the new loan levels will reduce down payments, assisting low and moderate-income families to buy a house.

The impact on both countries from war-related oil cutbacks in the Middle East.

The federal proposal to extend the interprovincial pipeline and reduce eastern Canada's reliance on foreign oil holds implications for customers in the U.S. midwest dependent on Canadian oil.

This point was driven home Monday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp who said Canada will renew its offer to supply northwestern U.S. areas with oil if the $3.6-billion Trans-Alaska proposal is abandoned.

He said energy policies are being revised and the oil may be needed to meet new domestic demands that would result from extending the interprovincial pipeline.

Besides saving energy, it is also argued that longer hours of daylight could cut down on crime in the streets as well as highway deaths, both of which occur more frequently during darkness.

As one proponent has put it, Ben awoke one morning to find his hotel room bathed in sunlight. Despite the fact that he was a notoriously late riser, Franklin decided with a certain amount of logic that the sunlight was wasted while he was usually sleeping and would be better used later in the day."

Did Nixon Milk Dairies?

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — New evidence has surfaced tying President Nixon to an alleged deal involving a pledge of $2 million in campaign money in exchange for favors to the dairy industry.

Investigative sources said Monday they have obtained a letter addressed to Nixon dated Dec. 16, 1970, reminding him of the industry's past support and telling him of the milk producers' need for immediate aid.

"The thrust of the letter was a request that the president approve new milk tariffs that the industry was interested in," one source said.

"It pointed out that the industry had $2 million available for 1972 campaign contributions," but continued aid for U.S. dairy farmers was necessary if they were to continue their support.

A month later, when the new Nixon budget was announced, proposed dairy subsidies rose nearly 10 per cent, compared with a slight increase for feed-grain subsidies and a major decrease in food-aid shipments, another method of government farm support.

Evidence indicates the letter went directly to then-presidential chief of staff. H. R. Haldeman.

One source said it isn't certain whether Nixon read the letter or was merely told of its contents.

The following March, however, three events took place:

—On March 22, 1971, the first $10,000 contribution from milk producers was secretly delivered to a group of dummy campaign committees that later turned their holdings over to the Nixon re-election campaign.

—The following day, President Nixon and then-Agriculture Secretary Clifford Hardin met at the White House with 16 spokesmen for the dairy industry.

—On March 25, Hardin reversed a 13-day-old decision not to grant an increase in federal price supports for milk and announced approval of a 27-cents-a-hundredweight increased in price supports, claiming he had received new economic data.

The decision was worth between $500 million and $700 million to U.S. milk producers, according to an industry estimate.

The milk-funds case was among issues being investigated by Archibald Cox before he was fired as special Watergate prosecutor.

The investigations now have been turned over to the justice department. But they remain partially blocked by Nixon's orders.

Sensative materials alleged to involve President Nixon's personal finances also were turned over to Cox's office hours before he was fired, ABC News reported Monday.

Correspondent Bill Gill said among the documents "was material supplied within the past week by an important new witness from the Miami area."

"According to informed sources," Gill said, "that testimony asserts the existence of an alleged 'private investment fund' administered on behalf of President Nixon through a bank owned by his closest friend, Bebe Rebozo."

Gill said "the alleged investment portfolio is being probed to determine whether large unreported political contributions may have been diverted to Nixon's personal use . . . and whether taxes were paid on any such amounts."

"According to the witness," the report added, "contributions from two international corporations amounting to more than $1 million may have been involved in the suspected 'Nixon portfolio'."

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board, meanwhile, has asked the FBI to investigate the disappearance of a confidential file on a Florida savings-and-loan firm operated by associates of Rebozo.

The missing file, according to board officials, contains a "digest and memoranda" that may show why the board overrode the recommendation of its own investigator and granted insurance to the Key Biscayne firm.

The apparent theft of the file was discovered Oct. 16 after some of the material in the file had been aired on a TV report the night before.

It was unclear if this was all the file contained, or whether it also contained notations on the memoranda explaining the reasons for the board's change of heart in granting the insurance.

The same day the file was reported stolen, a copy was given to the Washington Post by Robert Marshall, a board spokesman.

Jail for Statements

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Dale McDonald has been sentenced to the maximum penalty provided for his conviction on five charges of making false immigration statements — six months in prison and a $500 fine. He had been found guilty on the charges which involved false statements about college degrees he claimed to have been awarded in the United States.

Legal Experts Agree: Impeachment Valid

By JOHN SAAR

WASHINGTON (WP) — Four of the leading U.S. law professors believe there are adequate grounds for commencing impeachment proceedings against President Nixon in the House of Representatives.

Three of the four believe that impeachment a medieval practice written into the Constitution to prevent a president becoming a king — is now needed to clear or convict the president. The fourth, Yale law Professor Alexander Bickel, stopped short of calling for impeachment, but called for an immediate House investigation — a step that is an essential part of impeachment preliminaries.

In a resolution addressed to Congress Monday the deans of 15 major law schools took a similar position by urging the creation of a special committee "to consider the necessity of presidential impeachment".

Professor Raoul Berger of Harvard University law school, said, "I have hesitated to say it before but after the events of the past few days he must be impeached."

Berger, who authored the definitive work on the impeachment process earlier this year, said that by offering a summary of the Watergate tapes and firing special prosecutor Archibald Cox, the president is in defiance of a court order: "Disobedience of the law is a subversion of the Constitution which is an impeachable offence."

Describing himself as taking a conservative view of constitutional law, Professor William van Alstyne, of Duke University law school, said he also now favored impeachment. "It's a last resort," he said in a telephone interview Monday, "but from events of the last five days the president appears to have blocked the conventional means of ascertaining whether there has been criminal wrong-doing. I don't see what else is left to do."

While urging that impeachment should be instituted only where there is clear evidence of serious wrong-doing by a chief executive, Professor Bickel of Yale said the House judiciary committee should proceed with an initial investigation. "There are grounds to suspect he may have been involved in high crimes or misdemeanors," he said. The evidence was "inconclusive" and since investigative attempts by special proseecutor Cox and the Senate Watergate Committee had failed, "a select committee of the House should issue subpoenas for the tapes and papers and see if there are grounds for impeachment."

Preble Stolz, professor of law at the University of California, Berkeley, believes President Nixon is "arguably impeachable on a number of actions . . . the most impeachable offence is the breach of the terms of (former attorney general Elliot) Richardson's Senate confirmation."

Stolz predicts an eventual impeachment could take months. "It's a horrifying thing," he said. "But I can't believe the president would put the country through that."

Impeachment of a president is the rarest of all criminal proceedings. It requires a motion calling for the president's impeachment to be introduced in the House of Representatives and then referred to the house judiciary committee for study.

That initial motion would broadly accuse the president of one or all the impeachable crimes—"treason, bribery, or other high crimes or misdemeanors." The judiciary committee would then, after study, submit articles of impeachment, a list of specific charges comparable to an indictment, to the full House.

If that passes by a simple majority vote, the stage is set for a full-scale trial in the Senate. The 100 senators would act as jury, a group of congressmen known as managers would conduct the prosecution, and Chief Justic Warren Burger would preside.

The defence is allowed considerable freedom. The defendant does not have to attend, may testify if he wishes, or leave his defence entirely to lawyers. If President Nixon were indeed to be impeached, a titanic legal battle between some of the best legal brains in the country is certain.

To Save a Vital Resource

Environment Minister Jack Davis' new proposal for unprecedented control of coastal fishing by coastal states is bound to run into stiff opposition at the United Nations sponsored Law of the Sea conference to be held next year. It will bump head-on into two historic rights—the freedom of the open seas, and traditional rights to fish certain fishing grounds which have been held by some nations for many generations. Some of the most powerful nations in the world will find that changes in these concepts will infringe on their preserves.

Any hope of success for the proposals could depend on some heavy trading. In any event, the prospect is that it could be many years before the coastal countries achieve their new objectives. And those years could see a pressing shortage of fish for a growing world population that would make acquiescence still more unlikely.

That is not to say that Mr. Davis' suggestion would not be an excellent development for Canada, among other maritime countries with offshore fisheries. The plan would empower such nations to block other countries out of the fishing grounds on their continental shelf areas, or alternatively, to collect licence fees from certain permitted fishing fleets.

In the case of Canada, the continental shelf extends for 200 miles off the Pacific coast, and for more than twice that distance into the Atlantic. This would include marine areas which historically have been classed as the high seas —and naval powers such as Britain, the United States and Russia have never been favorable to interference with access to any part of the high seas, particularly where such a prohibition could block off an accustomed sea route through a narrow body of water. They would oppose the idea in principle as well as in practice, fearing insertion of the small end of the wedge in international law.

Prohibition of fishing entry could also run directly into the principle of historic rights—that is, the right of a country to continue using fishing grounds which it has visited for a great many years. This is the nub of the controversy between Iceland and Britain, for the latter country has sent fishing boats to Icelandic waters for three centuries. It also is involved in Canada's relations with the United States, whose fishermen have fished in some Canadian grounds for many years.

Mr. Davis plans to meet such objections with special permissions, but also with fees for the right to fish. Changes would be spread over a number of years in order to prevent sudden hardship.

The plan is not a matter of mere national selfishness, although naturally Canada's interests would be protected. Basically it would involve a system of control of the annual catch in order to preserve the future of fish species. At the present time there is a real danger that visiting foreign fleets will wipe out fish stocks through overfishing without regard to conservation practices.

Mr. Davis' plan would give coastal countries with continental shelf jurisdiction a chance to ensure that fish populations will be perpetuated. The greater dependence of the world of the near future on the food supplies in the sea will make such conservation measures all the more necessary. Some countries will not like the idea, but in one form or another it will have to be faced soon. With luck, at least a start could be made next year at the conference. The fish will not wait forever.

Social Credit at the Brink

As if provincial Social Crediters are not in enough of a tizzy over their November 24 leadership convention, their national president told them the other day in Richmond that the party's greatest future lies in the federal rather than the provincial arena. Eschewing such advice, six candidates have already surfaced in search of the provincial party leadership and at least one other major candidate is treading water as he sizes up his chances.

Those with hats firmly in the ring are: James Chabot, Columbia River; Bill Bennett, South Okanagan; Bob McClelland, Langley; Harvey Schroeder, Chilliwack; Ed Smith, North Peace River; and a Burnaby accountant, James Mason.

Former Socred cabinet minister Phil Gaglardi, who was defeated in the last provincial election, is running in everything but name. As the leadership convention draws nearer, Mr. Gaglardi has been frequently stumping the province, talking to any group that would listen.

Who will win the party's leadership is anybody's guess at this point. Unquestionably, Bill Bennett, son of former Premier W. A. C. Bennett is the front-runner, although the younger Bennett has said Mr. Gaglardi is the major threat in the leadership contest. Nor should able Socred house leader, James Chabot, be discounted as a compromise candidate.

But excepting Mr. Bennett, the candidates are either old familiar faces or complete unknowns. And the issue here is pure and simple power. Smarting from a defeat in the last provincial election that left them with only 10 sitting members, the Social Credit party is poised on the brink. The wrong choice of leader could send them plunging into the abyss of a right-wing splinter movement. The right choice might ensure their future as a viable political force in B.C. Considering the implications for the future of the party the November contest will be a lively affair, and perhaps not without anguish.

ROB BULL

The Battle of the Budget

MONTREAL — Everybody knew that behind the current Quebec election would be the arguments for separatism or confederation, the political sovereignty and economic association of the Parti Quebecois versus the decentralized federalism favored by the Quebec Liberals.

What they did not know was the bizarre form the debate would take. Quebecers are now watching the governing party attack a model budget proposed by an opposition party.

It all started some time ago when the Parti Quebecois promised to produce its pseudo-budget for "Year One of independence." With the start of the election campaign bits and pieces of it started to appear in a fashion termed by Premier Robert Bourassa "a fiscal strip-tease."

"Where is the whole budget," the premier thundered. "Let them produce it. When they release it the Parti Quebecois will meet its Waterloo." It would be demolished, he said, by a capable team of Liberal economists quarterbacked by himself.

Three-Day Study

Premier Bourassa took three days to look it over.

Parti Quebecois economist Jacques Parizeau said the budget should be seen as the projected accounts for an independent state with all its resources at its command.

Mr. Levesque described it as the PQ platform in figures, a sample of the kind of expertise the party had at its disposal and a clear statement of the kinds of things Quebec could do if it had available the full tax resources of the province.

Like any good pseudo-budget, the PQ document promised a surplus, in this case a massive one of $181.5 million. Quebec would save $400 million by ending the duplication of jobs performed by both the federal and provincial governments, and would cut down on defence spending because a free Quebec would only have an 8,000-man army.

The bulk of the PQ government's spending would go to social programs. Taxes on those earning less than $11,000 per family would not rise.

The reaction of Vincent Prince, an editorial writer in La Presse, was typical of that of most of the province's media.

Mr. Prince was impressed by the technical know-how displayed by those who made the budget, a team of some of the brightest economists and most experienced civil servants in the province.

But he noted that it was based on the most optimistic forecasts, the presumption that there would be no slowdown in the Quebec economy and the belief that Canada would willingly accept a negotiated monetary union with a free Quebec.

The pseudo-budget, he wrote, could "not be considered an answer to those who questioned the advantages between a sovereign Quebec and Quebec as a member of the Canadian federation. Far from ending the debate it can only make it more lively."

This is more or less what has happened.

Bryce Mackasey told a Montreal business luncheon that any democratic move to independence in Quebec would be based on the belief that a free Quebec would be better able to deal with slums, pollution, housing shortages, low wages and unemployment.

"That's why the Quebec election is being fought on economic issues," he said.

Although he did not say so, presumably that is why federalists are arguing that a separate Quebec would have a disastrous effect on the Quebec economy

PREMIER BOURASSA
. . . fiscal strip-tease

thus hurting most the people in low-income groups that the PQ says it wants to help.

The first argument can be summed up in the question raised by Union Nationale leader Gabriel Loubier, who asked, "What kind of money are they going to use — monopoly money?"

The liberals, including Mr. Bourassa and three other cabinet ministers, seriously questioned whether a free Quebec would be allowed to continue using the Canadian dollar.

If it were, they argue, important economic decisions affecting Quebec would still be made outside Quebec, thus rendering any independence illusory.

The PQ retorted that such questions would be settled between Ottawa and Quebec as equals, which was not the case at present.

To the Liberal prediction that a new Quebec dollar would depreciate rapidly the PQ retorted that a Quebec dollar would float and find its true value reflecting the basic strength of the Quebec economy in relation to others.

The Liberals have also said that the PQ is making a major presumption in basing its income on an economy developing at the same rapid rate as the Quebec one has shown in the past two years. Mr. Parizeau has said his estimate of the Quebec economy's growth seems realistic to him.

While various economists have spoken out in favor and against the pseudo-budget, predicting everything from massive capital flights to no major economic change, there has been one note of moderation.

It comes from economist Eric Kierans, a former provincial cabinet colleague of Rene Levesque and a former federal cabinet minster as well, who spoke on a noon-hour CBC radio program and amplified his remarks for two of the province's newspapers.

"Independence," he said, "will affect the economic well-being of every man, woman and child in Quebec regardless of the language they speak.

"With separation a fact, events will not go on as before and no one knows this better than the authors of the budget. Private investment (excluding housing) declined from $2.2 billions in 1966 to $1.9 billion in 1970 when seperation was only a mild threat and not a fact . . . It is only during the last two years that private investment in Quebec has passed its 1966 levels."

Dependent Quebec

He notes that the PQ budget does not propose to greatly alter the structure of corporate taxes, thus throwing the burden for financing the social reforms on the private taxpayer.

A separate Quebec will be dependent, then, as much as or more than the province is at present on big business, much of which is controlled from outside.

He also notes that Canadians now pay heavily for tariffs protecting Quebec's furniture and clothing industries and asks if they would be as willing to do so for an independent Quebec.

"History will record that Quebec and Claude Castonguay (former provincial Liberal social affairs minister) forced this nation along new paths of social legislation and improved the quality of life for all Canadians.

"The Party Quebecois budget shows that the new state will be independent in name only. We in Quebec will be better off by staying in Confederation and helping to force, with our sister provinces, new directions in a truly federal system."

JAMES RESTON

Kissinger's Nobel Prize

You will get a lot of arguments and even some sneers against a Nobel Peace Prize for Henry Kissinger, but in this corner it is an honor earned under very difficult circumstances.

The arguments against him are that he didn't end the Vietnam war, but allowed himself to be used to prolong it; that he tolerated the Christmas bombing of Vietnam last year when he was privately opposed to it; and that he allowed himself again to be used by the President in the wiretapping of his own colleagues on the National Security Council.

There is something to these arguments, but not much. It is doubtful that the telephones of his colleagues would have been tapped if he had opposed it and been willing to resign rather than tolerate it. That is a strong point against him. But it is probably wrong and even ridiculous to suppose that he could have shortened the war by defying the President's policies, resigning, and taking his opposition to the country. President Nixon was riding too high at that time.

Severely Criticized

There is little doubt that Kissinger was tempted to oppose the President and get out over the past couple of years. He was severely criticized by many of his former academic colleagues at Harvard and elsewhere, whose respect and friendship he valued very highly. He was the object of suspicion and envy by Haldeman and Ehrlichman, among others, on "the other side of the White House," and far from being on close personal relations with the President, he was not even sure that his own telephones were not being tapped by the President's other aides.

Also, he had vowed to get out after two years in the White House, believing that nobody could give objective advice to the President after so long a time, and by the end of the first Nixon term, he was being offered more than a million dollars to write the story of his White House experience.

Nevertheless, he stayed on the job, and nobody can be sure of his motives. Love of peace and power? Not wanting to leave the President, who had brought him to the pinnacle of world diplomacy, when the Administration was in trouble? Respect for the President's policies of detente with China and the Soviet Union? Probably some or all these influenced Kissinger, plus the fact that, at 50, he was too young to retreat from the spotlight, and too old to find anything else so exciting or rewarding.

Also, Kissinger had built a relationship of respect and even admiration with Le Duc Tho of North Vietnam and Chou En-lai of the People's Republic of China, and while he never confused personal relationships with national interests, no doubt he felt that these past associations might be useful, and President Nixon obviously agreed when he made Kissinger Secretary of State.

HENRY KISSINGER
. . . too many honors

Something has to be said here for the President about all this. Nixon chose Kissinger as his foreign policy adviser on the advice of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, without really knowing Kissinger. It was the President who made the opening to China through President de Gaulle of France, not Kissinger. And it was the President who set the time-table for withdrawal from Vietnam not Kissinger.

Kissinger has been a skillful negotiator and an articulate spokesman of highly controversial Vietnam policy and it is ironical that he should get the Nobel Peace Prize just when his negotiations for detente with the Soviet Union and China seem to be in doubt, if not in trouble.

But the awarding of prizes is always a controversial and ambiguous business and if somebody has to be tapped for the last year's contribution to peace, who better than Kissinger?

Maintained Peace

He even maintained what peace there was in Washington in the last year between the White House and the Congress, between the White House and the French on the devaluation of the dollar and between the White House and the Administration's critics in the press.

At least he kept the lines of communication open for the Administration to the universities, to the major embassies and to the Administration's adversaries, and he has tried to revive a dialogue with the Europeans on the future of Atlantic relations.

Again ironically, he was tapped for the Nobel Prize just when the Europeans were beginning to say he had lately become a little peremptory if not a little arrogant in his recent dealings with them, but even they are still the first to say that he has the mind and the energy to deal with them in both historic and contemporary terms.

Kissinger, despite his pride and ambition, would probably have preferred to avoid such an honor at this time. He is getting almost too many honors precisely when so many of his colleagues, including the President, are getting so much criticism. But he will probably contrive to be suitably modest. All he needs now is a wife to keep him in line.

What's Obscene?

It has happened again. A movie was advertised with all kinds of warnings so that nobody who would possibly be offended had to go and see it. But some imbecile prunes had to anyway, and then, possibly after having sat through the whole performance of over two hours including the intermission, rushed to the Victoria police who seized the film and closed down the theatre. (The charge has been dismissed—Ed.)

Grown up people are not allowed to see what they want if it is considered "dirty" by a few; but any child can go to the wax museum's "Chamber of Horror" or watch "family type" movies, like John Wayne slaughtering Indians and other bad guys.

I found "Oh Calcutta" extremely witty and it seems that the rest of the audience did the same, judging by the roars of laughter. It also included some very beautiful ballet (yes, nude). But are we supposed to hang our heads in shame? And do we have "a filthy mind" just because we think the human body is beautiful and sex is nice and fun. I don't think so. — Sven Rasmussen, 8443 West Saanich Rd., Saanichton.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 23, 1913

When the plans came up in the city council last evening for the Canadian Northern Pacific Railway bridge across Selkirk waters, Alderman Gleason objected to the location of a pile structure across the beautiful waters of the Arm and said, that at least a steel bridge should be constructed. He therefore moved that the council disapprove of the proposed structure and that the representatives of the company should be communicated with. Alderman MacNeill urged caution if the council was not to make a blunder on a matter where the aldermen did not know their full power. The proposed street crossing of the company on the Pat Bay line was approved, subject to recommendations made thereon by the city engineer.

The plan would empower such nations to block other countries out of the fishing grounds on their continental shelf areas, or alternatively, to collect licence fees from certain permitted fishing fleets.

In the case of Canada, the continental shelf extends for 200 miles off the Pacific coast, and for more than twice that distance into the Atlantic. This would include marine areas which historically have been classed as the high seas —and naval powers such as Britain, the United States and Russia have never been favorable to interference with access to any part of the high seas, particularly where such a prohibition could block off an accustomed sea route through a narrow body of water. They would oppose the idea in principle as well as in practice, fearing insertion of the small end of the wedge in international law.

Prohibition of fishing entry could also run directly into the principle of historic rights—that is, the right of a country to continue using fishing grounds which it has visited for a great many years. This is the nub of the controversy between Iceland and Britain, for the latter country has sent fishing boats to Icelandic waters for three centuries. It also is involved in Canada's relations with the United States, whose fishermen have fished in some Canadian grounds for many years.

Mr. Davis plans to meet such objections with special permissions, but also with fees for the right to fish. Changes would be spread over a number of years in order to prevent sudden hardship.

The plan is not a matter of mere national selfishness, although naturally Canada's interests would be protected. Basically it would involve a system of control of the annual catch in order to preserve the future of fish species. At the present time there is a real danger that visiting foreign fleets will wipe out fish stocks through overfishing without regard to conservation practices.

Mr. Davis' plan would give coastal countries with continental shelf jurisdiction a chance to ensure that fish populations will be perpetuated. The greater dependence of the world of the near future on the food supplies in the sea will make such conservation measures all the more necessary. Some countries will not like the idea, but in one form or another it will have to be faced soon. With luck, at least a start could be made next year at the conference. The fish will not wait forever.

Social Credit at the Brink

As if provincial Social Crediters are not in enough of a tizzy over their November 24 leadership convention, their national president told them the other day in Richmond that the party's greatest future lies in the federal rather than the provincial arena. Eschewing such advice, six candidates have already surfaced in search of the provincial party leadership and at least one other major candidate is treading water as he sizes up his chances.

Those with hats firmly in the ring are: James Chabot, Columbia River; Bill Bennett, South Okanagan; Bob McClelland, Langley; Harvey Schroeder, Chilliwack; Ed Smith, North Peace River; and a Burnaby accountant, James Mason.

Former Socred cabinet minister Phil Gaglardi, who was defeated in the last provincial election, is running in everything but name. As the leadership convention draws nearer, Mr. Gaglardi has been frequently stumping the province, talking to any group that would listen.

Who will win the party's leadership is anybody's guess at this point. Unquestionably, Bill Bennett, son of former Premier W. A. C. Bennett is the front-runner, although the younger Bennett has said Mr. Gaglardi is the major threat in the leadership contest. Nor should able Socred house leader, James Chabot, be discounted as a compromise candidate.

But excepting Mr. Bennett, the candidates are either old familiar faces or complete unknowns. And the issue here is pure and simple power. Smarting from a defeat in the last provincial election that left them with only 10 sitting members, the Social Credit party is poised on the brink. The wrong choice of leader could send them plunging into the abyss of a right-wing splinter movement. The right choice might ensure their future as a viable political force in B.C. Considering the implications for the future of the party the November contest will be a lively affair, and perhaps not without anguish.

"... Dad, I've decided what I'm going to be ... a sub-oceanic, aqua-structural geodynamicist specializing in Northern latitudes ... not even one of those is unemployed in Canada this year ..."

ROB BULL

The Battle of the Budget

MONTREAL — Everybody knew that behind the current Quebec election would be the arguments for separatism or confederation, the political sovereignty and economic association of the Parti Quebecois versus the decentralized federalism favored by the Quebec Liberals.

What they did not know was the bizarre form the debate would take. Quebecers are now watching the governing party attack a model budget proposed by an opposition party.

It all started some time ago when the Parti Quebecois promised to produce its pseudo-budget for "Year One of independence." With the start of the election campaign bits and pieces of it started to appear in a fashion termed by Premier Robert Bourassa "a fiscal strip-tease."

"Where is the whole budget," the premier thundered. "Let them produce it. When they release it the Parti Quebecois will meet its Waterloo." It would be demolished, he said, by a capable team of Liberal economists quarterbacked by himself.

The pseudo-budget, a 500-page document, was finally released with the usual PQ flair with reporters studying it behind closed doors before meeting with the PQ shadow cabinet to discuss it.

Three-Day Study

Premier Bourassa took three days to look it over.

Parti Quebecois economist Jacques Parizeau said the budget should be seen as the projected accounts for an independent state with all its resources at its command.

Mr. Levesque described it as the PQ platform in figures, a sample of the kind of expertise the party had at its disposal and a clear statement of the kinds of things Quebec could do if it had available the full tax resources of the province.

Like any good pseudo-budget, the PQ document promised a surplus, in this case a massive one of $181.5 million. Quebec would save $400 million by ending the duplication of jobs performed by both the federal and provincial governments, and would cut down on defence spending because a free Quebec would only have an 8,000-man army.

The bulk of the PQ government's spending would go to social programs. Taxes on those earning less than $11,000 per family would not rise.

The reaction of Vincent Prince, an editorial writer in La Presse, was typical of that of most of the province's media.

Mr. Prince was impressed by the technical know-how displayed by those who made the budget, a team of some of the brightest economists and most experienced civil servants in the province.

But he noted that it was based on the most optimistic forecasts, the presumption that there would be no slowdown in the Quebec economy and the belief that Canada would willingly accept a negotiated monetary union with a free Quebec.

The pseudo-budget, he wrote, could "not be considered an answer to those who questioned the advantages between a sovereign Quebec and Quebec as a member of the Canadian federation. Far from ending the debate it can only make it more lively."

This is more or less what has happened.

Bryce Mackasey told a Montreal business luncheon that any democratic move to independence in Quebec would be based on the belief that a free Quebec would be better able to deal with slums, pollution, housing shortages, low wages and unemployment.

"That's why the Quebec election is being fought on economic issues," he said.

Although he did not say so, presumably that is why federalists are arguing that a separate Quebec would have a disastrous effect on the Quebec economy

PREMIER BOURASSA
... fiscal strip-tease

thus hurting most the people in low-income groups that the PQ says it wants to help.

The first argument can be summed up in the question raised by Union Nationale leader Gabriel Loubier, who asked, "What kind of money are they going to use — monopoly money?"

The Liberals, including Mr. Bourassa and three other cabinet ministers, seriously questioned whether a free Quebec would be allowed to continue using the Canadian dollar.

If it were, they argue, important economic decisions affecting Quebec would still be made outside Quebec, thus rendering any independence illusory.

The PQ retorted that such questions would be settled between Ottawa and Quebec as equals, which was not the case at present.

To the Liberal prediction that a new Quebec dollar would depreciate rapidly the PQ retorted that a Quebec dollar would float and find its true value reflecting the basic strength of the Quebec economy in relation to others.

The Liberals have also said that the PQ is making a major presumption in basing its income on an economy developing at the same rapid rate as the Quebec one has shown in the past two years. Mr. Parizeau has said his estimate of the Quebec economy's growth seems realistic to him.

While various economists have spoken out in favor and against the pseudo-budget, predicting everything from massive capital flights to no major economic change, there has been one note of moderation.

It comes from economist Eric Kierans, a former provincial cabinet colleague of Rene Levesque and a former federal cabinet minster as well, who spoke on a noon-hour CBC radio program and amplified his remarks for two of the province's newspapers.

"Independence," he said, "will affect the economic well-being of every man, woman and child in Quebec regardless of the language they speak.

"With separation a fact, events will not go on as before and no one knows this better than the authors of the budget. Private investment (excluding housing) declined from $2.2 billions in 1966 to $1.9 billion in 1970 when seperation was only a mild threat and not a fact ... It is only during the last two years that private investment in Quebec has passed its 1966 levels."

Dependent Quebec

He notes that the PQ budget does not propose to greatly alter the structure of corporate taxes, thus throwing the burden for financing the social reforms on the private taxpayer.

A separate Quebec will be dependent, then, as much as or more than the province is at present on big business, much of which is controlled from outside.

He also notes that Canadians now pay heavily for tariffs protecting Quebec's furniture and clothing industries and asks if they would be as willing to do so for an independent Quebec.

"History will record that Quebec and Claude Castonguay (former provincial Liberal social affairs minister) forced this nation along new paths of social legislation and improved the quality of life for all Canadians.

"The Party Quebecois budget shows that the new state will be independent in name only. We in Quebec will be better off by staying in Confederation and helping to force, with our sister provinces, new directions in a truly federal system."

JAMES RESTON

Kissinger's Nobel Prize

You will get a lot of arguments and even some sneers against a Nobel Peace Prize for Henry Kissinger, but in this corner it is an honor earned under very difficult circumstances.

The arguments against him are that he didn't end the Vietnam war, but allowed himself to be used to prolong it; that he tolerated the Christmas bombing of Vietnam last year when he was privately opposed to it; and that he allowed himself again to be used by the President in the wiretapping of his own colleagues on the National Security Council.

There is something to these arguments, but not much. It is doubtful that the telephones of his colleagues would have been tapped if he had opposed it and been willing to resign rather than tolerate it. That is a strong point against him. But it is probably wrong and even ridiculous to suppose that he could have shortened the war by defying the President's policies, resigning, and taking his opposition to the country. President Nixon was riding too high at that time.

Severely Criticized

There is little doubt that Kissinger was tempted to oppose the President and get out over the past couple of years. He was severely criticized by many of his former academic colleagues at Harvard and elsewhere, whose respect and friendship he valued very highly. He was the object of suspicion and envy by Haldeman and Ehrlichman, among others, on "the other side of the White House," and far from being on close personal relations with the President, he was not even sure that his own telephones were not being tapped by the President's other aides.

Also, he had vowed to get out after two years in the White House, believing that nobody could give objective advice to the President after so long a time, and by the end of the first Nixon term, he was being offered more than a million dollars to write the story of his White House experience.

Nevertheless, he stayed on the job, and nobody can be sure of his motives. Love of peace and power? Not wanting to leave the President, who had brought him to the pinnacle of world diplomacy, when the Administration was in trouble? Respect for the President's policies of detente with China and the Soviet Union? Probably some or all these influenced Kissinger, plus the fact that, at 50, he was too young to retreat from the spotlight, and too old to find anything else so exciting or rewarding.

Also, Kissinger had built a relationship of respect and even admiration with Le Duc Tho of North Vietnam and Chou En-lai of the People's Republic of China, and while he never confused personal relationships with national interests, no doubt he felt that these past associations might be useful, and President Nixon obviously agreed when he made Kissinger Secretary of State.

HENRY KISSINGER
... too many honors

Something has to be said here for the President about all this. Nixon chose Kissinger as his foreign policy adviser on the advice of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, without really knowing Kissinger. It was the President who made the opening to China through President de Gaulle of France, not Kissinger. And it was the President who set the time-table for withdrawal from Vietnam not Kissinger.

Kissinger has been a skillful negotiator and an articulate spokesman of highly controversial Vietnam policy and it is ironical that he should get the Nobel Peace Prize just when his negotiations for detente with the Soviet Union and China seem to be in doubt, if not in trouble.

But the awarding of prizes is always a controversial and ambiguous business and if somebody has to be tapped for the last year's contribution to peace, who better than Kissinger?

Maintained Peace

He even maintained what peace there was in Washington in the last year between the White House and the Congress, between the White House and the French on the devaluation of the dollar and between the White House and the Administration's critics in the press.

At least he kept the lines of communication open for the Administration to the universities, to the major embassies and to the Administration's adversaries, and he has tried to revive a dialogue with the Europeans on the future of Atlantic relations.

Again ironically, he was tapped for the Nobel Prize just when the Europeans were beginning to say he had lately become a little peremptory if not a little arrogant in his recent dealings with them, but even they are still the first to say that he has the mind and the energy to deal with them in both historic and contemporary terms.

Kissinger, despite his pride and ambition, would probably have preferred to avoid such an honor at this time. He is getting almost too many honors precisely when so many of his colleagues, including the President, are getting so much criticism. But he will probably contrive to be suitably modest. All he needs now is a wife to keep him in line.

What's Obscene?

It has happened again. A movie was advertised with all kinds of warnings so that nobody who would possibly be offended had to go and see it. But some imbecile prunes had to anyway, and then, possibly after having sat through the whole performance of over two hours including the intermission, rushed to the Victoria police who seized the film and closed down the theatre. (The charge has been dismissed—Ed.)

Grown up people are not allowed to see what they want if it is considered "dirty" by a few; but any child can go to the wax museum's "Chamber of Horror" or watch "family type" movies, like John Wayne slaughtering Indians and other bad guys.

I found "Oh Calcutta" extremely witty and it seems that the rest of the audience did the same, judging by the roars of laughter. It also included some very beautiful ballet (yes, nude). But are we supposed to hang our heads in shame? And do we have "a filthy mind" just because we think the human body is beautiful and sex is nice and fun. I don't think so. — Sven Rasmussen, 8449 West Saanich Rd., Saanichton.

From the Times of October 23, 1913

When the plans came up in the city council last evening for the Canadian Northern Pacific Railway bridge across Selkirk waters, Alderman Gleason objected to the location of a pile structure across the beautiful waters of the Arm and said, that at least a steel bridge should be constructed. He therefore moved that the council disapprove of the proposed structure and that the representatives of the company should be communicated with. Alderman MacNeill urged caution if the council was not to make a blunder on a matter where the aldermen did not know their full power. The proposed street crossing of the company on the Pat Bay line was approved, subject to recommendations made thereon by the city engineer.

WHERE EVERYONE EATS TOGETHER

By JOHN BURNS

PEKING — After surviving for several days with almost no rest two Canadian newsmen covering Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau in China had no wish to do anything but sleep when they boarded a train in the provincial city of Lyouang early one evening.

In a matter or minutes the two were tucked up in their bunks with the lights off and the curtains drawn. But before they could doze off insistent knocking at the door announced the arrival of a Chinese official delegated to summon them to dinner in the restaurant car.

After the Canadian had explained their case the official withdrew, but he was back again within minutes with another more senior comrade, who tried unavailingly to persuade the newsmen that dinner was essential to their wellbeing. Seeing that the Canadians were adamant, the men took their leave, only to return with an even more senior comrade, who abandoned kindly persuasion and addressed the Canadians in terms that were uncharacteristically blunt for a Chinese official.

"Gentlemen," he said, "it is important to understand that we Chinese organize our lives collectively and expect our guests to do likewise. There can be no room for individual preferences."

The newsmen, somewhat taken aback, quickly settled on a compromise whereby one remained in the compartment to sleep while the other trooped dutifully off to dinner. After some deliberation the Chinese accepted the compromise, perhaps taking comfort in Chairman Mao's dictum that Communists must learn to distinguish between bad elements who can be reformed and others who cannot.

Inconsequential as it was, the incident serves to illustrate the trials and tribulations that the Chinese and their western visitors undergo as they strive for an acceptable compromise between the rigid discipline with which the Chinese like to organize their lives and the propensity for spontaneity and individualism that most western visitors display.

The compromise is never an easy one to reach, and particularly so when the visitors are newsmen, who tend to be more than usually deficient in those attitudes — an unfailing obedience to authority and a willingness to subordinate individual preferences to the collective will — that are so typical of the Chinese and so rare among citizens of the western democracies.

Where newsmen are concerned, the potential for conflict is sharpened by widely differing perceptions of the function of the press. Chinese officials have gained a much greater understanding of the western press in recent years but there is still a wide gulf between what they are willing to provide in terms of access to people and places and the minimum that most western newsmen demand.

The gulf was certainly there with the Canadians, who flew into the Chinese capital with numerous story ideas that were destined for disappointment. Despite all manner of entreaties officials acceded only to the most routine requests.

Demand, But No Supply

By JOYCE EGGINTON
London Observer

NEW YORK — The United States, for so long the land of plenty, is beset by sporadic and worsening shortages. In scattered parts of the country, gasoline has been unofficially rationed for months. Soap is in short supply. A family may have to wait a year for delivery of a new deep freeze. Plumbers cannot get toilets. And there have been no raisins in the supermarkets since the beginning of summer.

Americans have been warned that the summer's gas shortage will develop into a winter crisis over fuel oil for heating homes and offices. Most have yet to discover that they may have difficulty buying anti-freeze solution for their car radiators when the temperature drops. And most are unaware of the extent of the shortages since the majority of these occur in specialized items like babies' napkins, candles, tennis balls, wood furniture, copper wire and aspirin.

It was, for example, only when I planned to do some transplanting in the garden recently that I discovered it has become almost impossible to buy chemical fertilizer, a fact which has been only too obvious to farmers for weeks. And though I was vaguely aware that building materials were in short supply, it was only when we recently sought to have some renovations to the kitchen and were warned that there would be a wait of at least three months for the construction boarding that the problem hit home.

Most shortages are the result of a seemingly endless chain reaction. Before beef price controls were lifted in September, farmers held back the steers they would normally have sent for slaughter in the hope of getting higher prices later. So there was not only a shortage of beef, but also a shortage of animal fat for tallow which has led to shortages of soap and candles. The beef shortage is also soon expected to lead to a shortage of shoe leather.

The drug and cosmetics industry is now feeling effects of the meat crisis. Tallow is used to make shampoos, ointments, creams and lotions so that some brands of these items are now hard to find, more expensive, or both.

The petroleum shortage — a case, which can only worsen, of national demand exceeding pfoduction—means that chemicals derived from petroleum are also in short supply.

So it is not only a problem for cosmetics manufacturers to get enough animal fat to make shampoo, but also enough plastic to shape the bottles in which it is packaged. And it is no use substituting glass bottles, because there is also a shortage of soda ash which is used in the manufacture of glass.

Almost all plastics derived from petroleum are expected to become scarcer and more expensive, from milk cartons to raincoats.

A national shortage of lumber — again because there isn't enough to meet the growing need — has not only affected the building and furniture industries; it has caused a shortage of newsprint and of all kinds of cartons and packaging.

U.S. demand is outstripping supplies in other natural products as well as petroleum and wood. This year's cotton harvest has not met the national need, hence sporadic shortages of napkins, tennis balls, blue jeans and towels. A wool shortage has added some $15 to the price of a man's suit, and may soon make lanoline-based cosmetics scarce.

The construction and plumbing industries are short of almost all essentials, from bricks to bathtubs. "If I had a thousand toilets to sell, I'd be king of Denver," one Colorado plumber remarked.

Among the non-essential food items that have disappeared (including corn syrup, sauerkraut and shrimps) the most missed have been raisins. Not only has there been a poor season's crop: California vineyard owners now find it more profitable to use all available land for wine production. We are promised a supply in November, at two or three times the former price.

...As Golden Age Ends

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

About a year ago, a guy I know moved out to the Sechelt Peninsula to build himself a wooden sailing boat.

When I stopped in recently to see how he was doing, he shook his head. The boat was basically complete — the hull was in one piece and the whole works was floating in the water. But he was having a hard time finishing her off.

"Shortages," he explained. "And prices."

He was at that stage in boat-building where all the skill in the world won't help you any longer. There are dozens and dozens of things you need, ranging from turnbuckles to portholes, that simply have to be bought. It would take hundreds of years to make them yourself. It used to be that these items could be picked up virtually at the snap of a finger, providing you had the necessary cash.

"But this last six months," said my friend, "it's been awful. The prices for everything I need have skyrocketed. I figured I had enough money when I started, but I didn't realize that the prices of so many things were going to bloody near double."

He reeled off a list of exotic sailboat parts whose cost had recently jumped fantastically. And then added:

"But that's just inflation, right? It's happening to everything. What's been really scaring the hell out of me is the shortages. Yeh, shortages. There are parts, lots of them, that you always used to be able to get whenever you wanted them just by going down to the local marine supply store. But now, when you go down to get something you need, there's a good chance they don't have it in, and there are some parts, no kidding, that they're not sure when they're going to have them again. If ever.

My friend was frustrated, angry — and, at the same time, alarmed. Alarmed, because, as he said: "You know, I was like everybody else. I was so bloody used to having an endless supply of things available that I really didn't think it would ever come to an end."

And now he senses that it has, indeed, come to an end.

The golden age of super-abundance, thanks to technology, has passed its high-point. The myth of the bottomless technological cornucopia is in the process of being debunked.

We face now, not an unending array of glittering goodies miraculously served up by robots, but a time of actual scarcity. The Megamachine is breaking down.

In case anyone hasn't noticed, the word "shortages" occurs now almost as repeatedly as the word "inflation." Incredible as it seems, the world's mightiest nation is already beating at our door, begging for electricity to keep Americans from having to shiver a bit this winter.

Not only are we faced with the spectacle of abandoned gas stations along the great American highways, but now the word comes out that heating fuel rationing has begun.

Often enough, it has been duly noted that "the United States is the first country to experience the future." The first to put its people on wheels. The first to thrust television into every home, the first to experience the psychedelic revolution. The first to land on the moon.

And now, perhaps, the first to experience the fall from technological utopia.

"I knew there was some kind of crash coming," said my friend, surveying his unfinished boat.

"But I didn't think it would happen so fast."

More About Press Councils: So Far They're Not Working

By DICK MacDONALD

The pity about press councils, those few we have in the world, is that they should have to exist at all.

It would be preferable if our news media didn't need watchdogs—such as press councils are—because there should be enough integrity within our communications industry to continually satisfy the public interest.

Tragically, that is not the case: Most of our news media seem to forget that they hold a trust, and, consequently, there are cries for a more responsible media. Ergo, press councils.

Press councils by themselves, however, do not offer a panacea for curing the media's ills. Those who think so — a few publishers, the record would show — are naive. Press councils are but one vehicle by which the public can express annoyance or dissatisfaction with the job being performed by their particular newspaprs; in the case of Quebec, radio and television, too.

The Quebec council, three years in gestation, has yet to prove itself. So we must say the jury has not even retired to render a verdict. The Ontario and Alberta councils, however, have shown themselves to be ill-conceived and ill-equipped. They lack any kind of clout and probably indicate that they were established as token gestures by comfortable publishers who, as have most industrialists, been bothered by all this consumerism talk.

The Senate committee report on mass media in 1970 recommended a national press council, which doesn't seem too practical, but that could only come about when there is better communication in the communications business. The committee also said there should be regional and local press-review councils, and the Ontario and Alberta groups undoubtedly grew from that recommendation (the Quebec council was being planned even before Keith Davey held his first hearing in Ottawa.)

The Davey Committee saw press councils as informal courts of appeal, where readers, if they couldn't resolve a complaint by speaking to an editor, could find a receptive ear.

But it is not solely a question of complaints about presumed mistreatment by the media that should concern us. More important — and, it is true, the Quebec press council seems to be on this abstract track—is the way in which the media present events and processes: The handling of "news." What is considered important, what is discarded? How do you ensure fair treatment of individuals? These are questions which must be of concern to the public (they are of continuing concern to principled journalists).

The Davey Committee emphasized that a press council must not function as a substitute for consultation between newspaper and complainant. A council is, then a supplement to the desired dialogue which should — but too often doesn't — exist between the newspaper as an institution and the public it purports to serve.

It is not enough to say, as many small-city (and a few big-city) owners have, the public, if dissatisfied with its news media, should switch channels or buy another paper. The trend toward a concentration of media — meaning fewer voices — simply doesn't allow someone to turn the dial or to seek out another local newspaper. And invoking the letters-to-the-editor argument is nothing short of childish.

Today, only the Combines Act exists to examine the ramifications of media mergers and business practices, but few prosecutions have ever been attempted. The Davey Committee wanted a board, but nothing has been done in this respect.

So, if we are faced with such a concentration (special-interest magazines notwithstanding), the onus is on the media which are left to do a much better job. Most aren't. They're lazy, first, and worried about profits, second. Unfortunately, press councils are not going to turn around that attitude, though they are, to be sure, a step in the right direction.

About the only "weapon" available to press councils is the power of embarrassment or persuasion. That can be effective in some communities, yet one of the faults of the Ontario and Alberta press councils (those in Britain, Scandanavia and the United States are in much the same position) is that any decisons they do make are given minimal publicity in the media. On second thought, that is not so much the fault of the councils but of the various media — which probably indicates, after all, the need for watchdogs or ombudsmen or critics.

The Minnesota Press Council, on which the new national news council in the U.S. has been modelled, has become a substitute for, or an alternative to, libel suits. While on one hand it has declined to fashion an "access" doctrine, on the other hand it has narrowed an editor's discretion to define proper redress.

The council plunged into headline accuracy review, a touchy area. While it refrained from judging the validity of editorial opinion, it reserved the privilege to judge the "factual accuracy and honesty" of editorials, another tender toe in journalism. The Minnesota council's sole sanction is jawboning and bad publicity, and part of its procedure is a requirement that before it will hold a hearing, the parties are expected to mediate face to face.

Irresponsible reporting provokes the public to advocate tighter laws. Hence, most people likely welcome the creation of press councils. That they have no legal authority to censure may be an interim phenomenon; if the media don't become more ethical and professional, if they don't remember the importance of fair play, society may eventually demand legislative or judicial controls. When that happens, we might as well say goodbye to our concept of a free society. We do need an unbridled, unrestricted media. But with that rein must go a far superior performance by our media.

At the moment, press councils are largely ineffective, but, of course, they are not the final answers to the media's ills. Perhaps, given strong public support, they can help make our media more aware of their editorial obligations.

The Quebec press council, looking as it is at all news media, may well set an example. If it doesn't, and if our media don't improve, the public's disillusionment will grow. Less credibility we can do without.

Just Plain Folks . . .

RUSSELL BAKER

"Hi there, folks, welcome to my home town. Washington, D.C. It's real good to bump into real folks once in a while like this. You don't see a lot of real folks hereabouts much anymore. Seems like they just kind of been avoiding us here lately.

"As long as you're here, might as well come on and stroll around a mite. It's kind of fun strolling in my home town, peeking in on the neighbors. They're right good folks, most of them, though no better than most. My Aunt Hepzibah—she's from Morrisonville, Virginia, you know—now she wouldn't come down here and walk around with me for all the —.

"Excuse me, friend, but there's Billy. Hi Billy! beautiful morning, ain't it?

"Billy's the preacher here. I expect you guessed that, seeing the Gospel in his hand. The reason he's hurrying on so like that is because he's headed over to see the quality folks who live in the big house with the big fence all around it. A heap of sadness in that great big house. A heap of sadness, friend. They need all the Gospel they can lay hands on. Poor old Billy! Seems like there just isn't enough time in the day for providing all the Gospel the quality folks need at times like—

"See that fellow? That's Dick! How's it going, Dick? Keep the old chin off the floor, fellow! Ain't nobody of any consequence gone to the jug yet, Dick!

"Poor old Dick! He's had a right hard time here lately. Dick's a pretty big man in this town, and some people been making a fuss, saying he knows more than he cares to let on about the break-in over the barber shop last summer a year ago. Seems like when you get up there in the big money people just enjoy tearing you down, don't it?

"Funny, though. I figured Billy'd be going over to see Dick, but the way Dick's going he's got to be headed up to the Hill. That probably means Dick is going up to see Jerry, because that's where Jerry lives. Up on the Hill. I bet Dick wants to ask Jerry once more to cross his heart and hope to die if he ever took any dirty money.

"We had some talk here about some of the quality folk taking a little dirty money, you see. Hey! See that nice looking fellow? That's Ted.

"You're looking great. Ted, they haven't laid a glove on you, fellow. Keep punching.

"What a nice smile old Ted has! Isn't that some smile, folks? Poor old Ted! He's got plenty of reason to feel glum, too, what with almost being jailed about the tax evasion and all. Fine way to treat a fellow, isn't it, for something everybody does. I wonder if Billy wasn't looking for Ted. Hey! Don't say anything, but get a load of these nine old fellows coming out of the drug store.

"Know who they are? The town judges. Doesn't take much to guess what they were doing in that drugstore.

"Having an ice-cream soda and arguing how to rule on Dick's big case. You see Dick's got some evidence in some crimes and he won't give it over to the police because naturally, being quality folk, he says if you are the town quality, you don't give up any evidence you don't want to, if you follow me.

"Isn't it wonderful, folks, being in a town where the judges even consider pushing the quality around? Oh! there's Henry. Henry, you old devil, overheard any good phone jokes lately?

"You folks had a real treat, seeing Henry on his way to work what with Dick, and the judges, and old Ted, and Jerry, and Billy with not enough hours in the day to bring the Gospel to everybody that needs it here. Henry is pretty much the fellow that runs the town.

"See those wires he has in his ears, that's how he hooks into your telephone when you're trying to plan some devilment that'll have you calling for Billy later if you can't get Pat—he used to be the police chief—to throw the evidence in the river.

"Oh! Oh! Cross the street! No questions, folks! There. He didn't see us. That was old law 'n' order John. He went off to New York and got charged with taking bribes. Lots of people thought he let the town down when he got charged in New York. Thinks he's too good to be charged in the old home town,' a lot of people said.

"My Aunt Hepzibah from Morrisonville, Virginia — she says nobody here ought to be allowed to cross the town line without being locked up, but she's a real old-fashioned, you know, yokel, who —

"Folks! Where'd you get to, folks? I thought you were right there behind me. Hey! Folks! Is that you? That cloud of dust heading for the outskirts of town?

"Now, what did they want to go and run off for? Oh, well. Tourists. Hi, there, officer. A cop. What can he possibly know? What is he thinking? Whatever it is, I'll deny it. Flatly."

OAK BAY HONORS PATTULLO

Oak Bay's newest street, near Newport Avenue, will be named Pattullo Place, after former B.C. premier T. D. (Duff) Pattullo.

In naming the street at a council meeting Monday it was agreed to establish a policy to stop naming new streets after former reeves of the municipality.

Mayor Frances Elford favored the new policy, adding both "Frances" and "Elford" have already been used in Greater Victoria.

Ald. Brian Smith, who suggested the name and establishment of the street-naming policy, described Pattullo as a "two-fisted sort of character," saying he lived near and loved the area where the new street lies.

Often described as "B.C.'s grand old man of politics," Pattullo was Liberal premer from 1933 to 1941. He died in 1956 at the age of 84.

On Pattullo's 76th birthday which he celebrated at his home, 951 Beach Drive, former Times editor Bruce Hutchison wrote this:

"The public life of Thomas Dufferin Pattullo is largely the story of British Columbia in the present generation . . . Listening to him, and looking at him, you realize that, whatever you may say of his policies, he has been a great man in our public affairs, a bold and striking figure who will long be legendary here, a man who was often mistaken but never afraid."

Minibike Bid 'Filed'

After "careful and sympathetic consideration" Monday, Oak Bay council passed a motion to receive and file a letter requesting an area be set aside for minibikes.

Mrs. R. W. Kirkwood, 3339 Gibbs Rd., wrote saying "these mini-bikes are mostly 50 cc" and "the motors are no noisier than lawn mowers."

Mrs. Kirkwood described the use of minibikes as "a good healthy sport" for boys between 13 and 15 and asked council for "the careful and sympathetic consideration which I think it deserves."

U.S. Book Influence Slapped by Council

Oak Bay council wants to know why 80 per cent of the books in Canadian public libraries are published in the United States.

In a letter received by council Monday, Greater Victoria Public Library director D. W. Miller briefly outlined the library's purchasing policy.

The "majority" of the books are purchased through Baker and Taylor Company, which has a warehouse in Reno, Nevada.

"When these titles are sold in Canada, they are marked up between 15 and 20 per cent. Often a customs duty of 10 per cent is added to this mark-up," said Miller. "I would guess that it would cost this library an additional $30,000 to $40,000 per year to purchase all its books through Canadian vendors."

Baker and Taylor Company, and "other American jobbers," are serving a large enough market to carry a good-sized inventory. No Canadian firm can come close to their inventory capabilities.

"Very few of the titles sold by the Canadian vendors are actually published in Canada," the letter continues, "they are merely acting as agents for the American firms."

Canadian publications are bought through the Co-operative Book Centre in Toronto which acquires its material through various publishers concentrated in Toronto.

The "complex" subject of book purchasing will be discussed by Canadian publishers and American jobbers at the B.C. Library Association's meeting in The Empress Nov. 3, said Miller.

Marina Sanitation All Poor

The sanitary facilities at federal government wharves and marinas in Sidney, Deep Cove and Victoria are inferior to those at Oak Bay Marina, says senior medical health officer J. L. M. Whitbread.

In a letter received by Oak Bay council Monday, Whitbread said for several years the Greater Victoria Metro-Health Board has "been attempting to obtain bylaws, or preferably provincial regulations, to stanardize the requirements in all marinas throughout the entire area.

"It would not be justifiable to enforce a standard on the Oak Bay Marina, while marinas in other municipalities and unorganized territory . . . are in an inferior condition to the facilities available at the Oak Bay Marina."

Whitbread's letter follows complaints from 50 Beach Drive residents who claim an increase in the growth of algae near the marina is due to a breakwater built to shelter the marina.

"The increase in algae growth is present in other bays around the Greater Victoria area, and not just in the area of the bay north of the Oak Bay Marina. This is not caused by the second breakwater," he said.

"I believe the complaints are made in an effort to prevent the Oak Bay Marina from increasing the number of berths from 450 to 600," he said adding the marina is "of considerable recreational value to the people living in Oak Bay."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Montreal man who told police he was a kleptomaniac was fined $75 for shop lifting a $3.99 bottle of vitamin pills on Friday from Shoppers Drug Mart, 3575 Douglas in Saanich.

Charles Eugene LaForest, 49, visiting relatives here, pleaded guilty before Judge Edmond St. Jorre.

LaForest's lawyer, Douglas Christie told the court his client usually shopped with a friend to prevent himself from impulsively stealing, but on this occasion was alone in the shop.

He had $112 with him at the time he took the vitamins.

The Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. earned $9,878,000 or 59 cents a share for the nine months ended Sept. 30 compared with $9,084,000 or 55 cents a share in 1972.

Gross revenue was $27,837,000 compared with $24,978,000 last year.

Canadian Utilities

Warmer than normal temperatures early in the year reduced net earnings for the first nine months of 1973 to $11,257,000, Canadian Utilities Ltd., parent company of three major Alberta gas and electric utility companies, reported today.

The warm temperatures affected the company's gas subsidiaries and left net earnings $727,000 below the $11,984,000 reached in the first three quarters of 1972.

Basic earnings per common share for the nine months were 91 cents compared with a restated 99 cents one year ago.

Canadian Utilities is the parent of Alberta Power Ltd., Canadian Western Natural Gas Co. Ltd. and Northwestern Utilities Ltd., which provide electric and natural gas service in Alberta, the Yukon and Northwest Territories and northern British Columbia.

Francana

Francana Oil and Gas Ltd. earned $619,036 or 11.8 cents a share in the nine months ended Sept. 30.

This compares with net earnings of $528,849 or 10.2 cents a share in the same period last year.

Gross income was $2,459,472 up 11 per cent from the $2,214,394 earned in the nine-month period of 1972.

Gray Beverage

A. L. Gray, president of Gray Beverage Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, has announced the purchase of Dominion Bottling Co. Ltd. of Edmonton, franchise bottlers of 7-Up and Crush for northern Alberta.

Gray said that Dominion, purchased from an Edmonton family, will be renamed Gray Beverage Alberta Ltd.

The purchase price was not announced.

Mattagami Lake Mines Ltd. reports profit of $18,404,000 or $2.78 a share for the nine months to Sept. 30.

These earnings are not comparable with the $7,480,000 or $1.13 a share earned for the first nine months of 1972 since Mattabi Mines Ltd. did not begin production until August, 1972.

Mattagami's 60 per cent interest in Mattabi for the three quarters this year is equivalent to $1.14 a share against eight cents a share for the two months it was in partial operation during the same period last year.

Beer Less Heady to Affluent

TORONTO (CP) — Increasing affluence and a shift in cultural attitudes probably are behind the change in drinking habits of Canadians, says the Brewers Association of Canada.

The association notes that Canadians are drinking proportionately less beer than they were in 1951 when 65 per cent of alcohol consumed came from beer, 29 per cent from spirits.

Latest figures show that for last year 54.9 per cent came from beer, 34.1 per cent from spirits and 11 per cent from wine.

President Kenneth Lavery says the increase in wine consumption "is also a function of a quality of life people perceive in which wine plays an important part."

Partly because the beer market has not enjoyed the same relative sales increase as other alcoholic beverages, Canada's three largest brewers have moved to diversify their operations.

John Labatt Ltd. of London, Ont., and Canadian Breweries Ltd. of Toronto have both entered the wine industry. The major diversification of Molson Companies Ltd. of Montreal has been a 1971 acquisition of Beaver Lumber Co. Ltd. and subsidiaries, which have 300 retail outlets across Canada.

Molson also has a wine interest through its 42-per-cent equity position in Rainier Companies Ltd. of Seattle, a brewery with wine operations in California.

In February, Canadian Breweries acquired the wine interests of Imasco Ltd. of Montreal for about $10.5 million. These were all in Western Canada and combined with eastern wineries of Canadian Breweries resulted in a national investment of $25 million controlling 30 per cent of domestic wine sales.

Labatt's wine interests include operations in Toronto, Moncton, N.B., and Penticton, B.C. In addition, subsidiaries are involved in the manufacture and sale of flour, feeds, consumer food products, fine chemicals and food service operations.

The three breweries account for about 95 per cent of the Canadian beer market. Canadian Breweries' share has steadily declined. Labatt has become the market leader with 36 per cent, Molson 30 per cent and Canadian Breweries 29 per cent.

The Labatt share includes sales of Oland's Breweries 1971 Ltd. of Halifax, acquired in 1971.

For fiscal 1974, Labatt has committed $20 million to plant expansion that includes $14 million at Toronto, $3 million in Edmonton and $2.5 million at the Oland plant in Halifax.

The company also has interests in brewing operations in Brazil, a 1970 venture undertaken jointly with Brascan Ltd. of Toronto, and in Trinidad and Zambia, entered into this year with substantial local government investment.

Molson has committed about $32 million this year to capital expenditures, a substantial proportion to brewing operations, compared with $22.5 million last year with about half on brewing.

Canadian Breweries intends to take a first step toward a unified image for its brands at its annual meeting next month when it asks shareholders to approve a name change to Carling O'Keefe Ltd.

A $3 million expansion is under way for its U.S. operations, Carling Brewing Co., which produces beer under the Carling Black Label, Stag and Heidelberg brands. Bennett Brewing Co. Ltd. of Newfoundland is also being expanded.

CP Rail University.

All good railways have basically the same equipment.

But we want to set something straight.

It takes people to run a great railway. People like Scott Vince, one of our Marketing and Sales Representatives.

That's why at CP Rail, we have our own little university.

Our curriculum includes 30 different courses. Scott has taken almost all of them.

One Marketing and Sales course is a 3-week session with tests each day.

Our courses cover every aspect of the freight transportation business.

We make extensive use of video tape recording equipment as well as the most modern audio-visual equipment.

Our courses average 8 hours a day and often go up to 12.

It isn't exactly kindergarten.

At CP Rail we believe people like Scott Vince are the key to a successful operation.

People who study freight as a science, to meet your transportation needs.

If you're planning on shipping something somewhere, our people are professionally trained to help.

CHARLES O. FINLEY
. . . refuses to bend

Finley, Baseball on Collision Course

OAKLAND (AP) — Charles O. Finley is a proud and stubborn man — refusing to bend under the iron fist of the commissioner, a state of near rebellion on the part of his players and taunts from the fans.

He is on a collision course with baseball.

"It is my ball club, my money. As long as I own this ball club, I will operate it my way," insists the maverick owner of Oakland Athletics.

"The A's are not up for sale.

The 53-year-old, snow-haired Finley, a headstrong and successful Chicago insurance millionaire, reiterated his determinatin to stand firm in the face of escalating pressures during the weekend.

He faces an almost certain fine from Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for first making a public announcement against the commissioner's orders and later seeking to shelve infielder Mike Andrews, whose two errors lost the second game to New York Mets in the World Series.

The Athletics defended their title Sunday by beating the Mets 5-2 in the decisive seventh game.

One of Finley's star players, Sal Bando, said Finley "lacked class." Another, Reggie Jackson, impulsively said he would like to be traded. Manager Dick Williams quit after Sunday's game.

Even Oakland fans, given a winning team three years in a row with the last two winning the World Series, joined in showing their distaste for the man who put the whole thing together.

Their attitude was reflected in signs that bobbed up in the final games of the World Series at the Oakland Coliseum:

"Keep the A's — Trade Finley."

"Finley is a Horse's A."

In a 90-minute interview in his motel suite not far from the Coliseum, Finley, relaxed, in shirt sleeves and measuring every word carefully, said he inherited his strict business principles from a stern father who worked for U.S. Steel in Gary, Ind.

"I worked 10 years in industry," he said. "I've been in business for another 25 years and I was brought up to do a job quickly, correctly and conscientiously. I expect anyone that's associated with me in any of my ventures to operate in the same manner."

Finley is regarded by some as a ruthless operator. Before he hired Williams three years ago, he had employed 10 managers in as many years in baseball. He operates with a skeleton administrative staff.

Finley's most celebrated action involving an employee, however, was an attempt to place Andrews on the injury list in the midst of the World Series after the infielder had made two errors, costing the Athletics three runs in their 10-7 loss to the Mets in the second game.

Commissioner Kuhn rejected the move with a severe reprimand. Andrews said Finley lied about his being injured and encouraged him to sign a document verifying a doctor's report of an ailment.

Finley stoutly defended his action, insisting that he did not fire Andrews — as it was made to appear — but had legally asked that Andrews be replaced on Oakland's World Series squad because of the infielder's shoulder ailment.

"The commissioner made it seem to appear he was forcing us to change our action," the owner said.

Finley said Andrews signed the doctor's report hesitatingly after bargaining with Finley for a 1974 contract.

Finley, victim of a mid-summer heart attack which slowed his activities, said he wanted to stay in baseball, but probably would dispose of his other two major sports franchises—Memphis Tams of the American Basketball Association and California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League.

"Any person who owns teams in two sports, the second sport is needed about as much as a hole in the head," he said.

Hockey: A Scout Looks Over the Crop

Some hockey talk. George Agar wished to be remembered to his friends in Victoria. George coached the Cougars in the 1960-61 Western League season before the team was disbanded, and now he's scouting players for the California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League. It's his third year and "yes, once in a while I do get tired of looking at hockey," he dared to admit of his role, a lifeline between eventual success or failure of professional teams.

"It's when a game gets one sided," he explained; "and when a team is running up a score there's really nothing to scout."

Otherwise it's hockey just about every night during the fall and winter months for George who now lives in Richmond. "My territory is the West," he said. "I do the Western Canada Junior, the Western and Central pro leagues, and also go into Ontario and Quebec."

Making notes, he pointed to a Philadelphia player Tom Bladen as a young defenceman to watch and why scouts sometimes go grey. "Two years ago in Edmonton, he wasn't considered that much, but now he certainly has filled in well for the Flyers. So you never know."

Agar also had kind words to say about Vancouver's rookie defenceman Bob Dailey who saw regular service for the Canucks, even when the club was shorthanded and also on the power play. Quite a tribute to a first-year man.

"He's a good one, and he's a better skater than he has shown too," said Agar. "For a big man he is fast and agile, and he can throw them, too. The latter was a reference to Dailey's punching ability, an obvious requisite for a rookie in the eyes of this scout.

Speaking of Throwing . . .

As to his own club, the Seals, "we are weak on defence," he readily admitted (Sunday the Seals got bombed 11-2 by previously-winless Detroit) and we don't have any rookies on the starting squad because we had traded away our draft choices," he explained.

Meanwhile, Agar, who played 134 games in the WHL, getting 60 goals and 99 assists for 159 points, and also coached at Los Angeles and in junior hockey, primarily at Saskatoon, was continually making book.

"I send in a report on every game," he said. A pro game like this doesn't require that much detail because we know most of the players anyway, but sometimes we might spot something that will help, and we can always go back and refer to the file we build up on a team or a player."

"Take Bob Kelly, for instance. He's got to be a bad player. The only thing he can do well is fight," Agar said. About Paulin Bordeleau (who didn't play Friday), Agar's book on him said: "A fine player; he'll excite the fans and trouble more than a few defencemen."

No Invites for Arnie

"Finley? Never see him," he said of the Seals' controversial owner. He never shows up at training camp. Fact is we had been at training camp for six days this year when Finley phoned Freddie (Glover) and asked: "When are you going to camp?"

Otherwise, Agar sees a bright future for an ex-Cougar, goalkeeper Ron Grahame, who is with Houston of "that other league." "I saw a lot of him when he was at Denver," Agar said. "He'll do."

Meanwhile, the swing may be West for NHL scouts, Bart Bradley for one was bemoaning the high price of real estate, having been ordered to B.C. from the Lakehead by Boston Bruins. Bruce Cowick and Dale Cook, two former Cougars on the Flyer payroll, are playing their hockey at Richmond; and for what it's worth, Bobby Schmautz of the Canucks picks the Flyers as heading for No. 1 in the NHL West.

"You've got to give them credit," he said. "They are a good club. This year they obviously are shooting for first place and they aren't going around taking those cheap penalties. Even (Dave) Schultz and (Don) Saleski are trying to play hockey." Schultz was the leading member of the "Broad Street Bullies" last year with 259 minutes in penalties and Saleski with 205 wasn't far behind.

"It was sure different out there," Schmautz quipped: "I got through a whole game without someone asking me to fight."

READY TO FUMBLE is Oakland's Charley Davis, held from behind by Barney Chavous of Denver Broncos while trying to avoid clubmate Bob Moore (88). Hit by another tackler, Davis bobbled ball, which was grabbed by Bill Thompson and carried 80 yards for first-quarter Denver touchdown in National Football League game that ended 23-23.

Turner's Toe Leaves Raiders Fit to Be Tied

DENVER (AP) — Denver Broncos, who have died by the field goal twice this season, learned to live with it Monday night as the Jim Turner-George Blanda kicking duel ended in a standoff.

Turner's third field goal of the second half, a 35-yarder with three seconds to play, enabled Denver to salvage a 23-23 tie with the favored Oakland Raiders in a National Football League game.

Blanda, 46, also had three successful boots, and his final one, from 49 yards out with 36 seconds left, appeared to have won it for the Raiders.

Denver had lost to San Francisco 36-34 and to Kansas City 16-14 earlier this season on fourth-quarter field goals by the opposition. It looked like more of the same until Charley Johnson moved the Broncos 34 yards on three plays to the Raider 28-yard line, setting up Turner's final kick.

"You can't take anything away from George's kick," Turner said, "but as soon as he hit it we felt we could get it right back."

The deadlock dropped the Raiders into a first-place tie with Kansas City in the American Conference's Western Division. Both clubs have 3-2-1 records. Denver stayed in contention with a 2-3-1 mark.

After safety Bill Thompson raced 80 yards with an Oakland fumble in the first quarter, Denver had to bounce back from a 13-7 deficit—as Blanda kicked two field goals and Mike Siani hauled in a scoring pass from Ken Stabler in the second quarter. The touchdown play covered 80 yards.

Stabler and wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff picked the Bronco zone defence to pieces. Stabler hit on 16 of 24 passes for 313 yards and two touchdowns, and Biletnikoff caught eight of them for 116 yards.

OAKLAND FIREMAN LEADS WAY AS 21 SERIES RECORDS BROKEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight individual and 13 team records were set during the 1973 world series with Oakland relief pitcher Darold Knowles establishing four of the baseball marks.

Knowles set a record for most games by a pitcher in one series, pitching in all seven games, most games at a fielding position by a pitcher and for most consecutive games by a pitcher in one series.

He also set a record for most world series saves, lifetime, four.

Don Hahn and Jerry Grote of the New York Mets set two records each.

Hahn set a record for most at-bats in one game, coming to the plate seven times in the second game of the series Oct. 14. That was the game won by the Mets 10-7 in 12 innings. the seven times at bat were also a record for an extra-inning game.

Grote had 71 chances in the field, most for a catcher in one series. He recorded 67 put outs, also a record for a catcher.

In addition to the 21 records set, 16 individual records and 10 team records were tied.

Young Rearguard Dealt to Cougars

Victoria Cougars' latest acquisition is Tim Williams, a stocky defenceman from Flin Flon Bombers, and if he can pack more bounce to the ounce, so much the better.

Cougars completed their deal with Flin Flon Monday, acquiring 17-year-old Williams in exchange for defenceman Kim Clackson. Duane Bray, an earlier acquisition, decided to quit hockey after moving from the Bombers to play one game with Victoria last week.

Williams, five feet, 10 inches and 180 pounds, and is the probable replacement for injured defenceman Lorry Gloeckner tonight when Cougars play Saskatoon Blades in a Western Canada Junior Hockey League contest in Saskatoon.

Gloeckner injured an ankle last Saturday against Medicine Hat Tigers and the club is awaiting the results of X-rays taken Monday.

It remains to be seen, of course, if Williams is a heavy hitter. This is his first WCHL season after playing last year for Dauphin of the Manitoba Junior League.

But there is little doubt that Cougars can help themselves with more solid body checking. So far, they're the least penalized team in the league, an indication that they're not stepping into opponents as much as coach Ollie Dorohoy would like.

Scoring statistics through the first five games show Cougars have served only 49 penalty minutes on their way to a 1-4 won-lost record.

In contrast, Flin Flon's Jerry Rollins has 76 penalty minutes to lead the league while team-mate Cam Connor has 71.

That's 10 points more than second-place Dale McMullen of Brandon, who has nine goals and nine assists, and Wheaties' Rick Blight, with eight goals and 10 assists.

Top Cougar scorers are Brad Anderson (three goals, five assists) and Ron Poole (two goals, six assists) with eight points each.

After tonight's game, Cougars close out their five-game road trip in Regina Wednesday against the Pats. Victoria is at home Saturday and next Tuesday to New Westminster Bruins.

SCORPIONS PICK LOOP

Victoria Scorpions Senior "A" basketball team has decided to enter the Seattle Parks Department League this season, manager Dave Henson announced today.

"It won't be finalized until I attend a meeting in Seattle Oct. 30," Henson said.

The Canadian Amateur Basketball Association has ruled that Scorpions must play in a league to qualify for CABA playoffs next spring. Victoria's application to enter the Vancouver-based Dogwood League was turned down last August.

The Seattle League includes Renton Roadrunners, Tacoma Plywood, Seattle Ruth Realty, University of Washington Black Students and a possible entry from Bellingham.

Charlie's Goals Upset Mt. Doug

Striker Charlie Davis scored both goals Monday as Victoria Tyees upset leading Mt. Douglas 2-1 in a Greater Victoria High School Soccer League match.

In other matches, Oak Bay nipped Esquimalt 2-1 and Mount View squeezed by Claremont, 2-1.

Davis, who now has six goals in his last six games, connected at the 20-minute mark of the first half and 10 minutes into the second half.

Brock Coupar replied late in the match for Mt. Douglas, which suffered its first loss of the season.

Claremont took an early lead on a goal by Bob Lee but Mount View bounced back to win on goals by Mark Cline and Bob Cool.

A scheduled Reynolds-Belmont match was postponed until Wednesday.

Former Skating Champ Retires

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) — Emmerich Danzer, Austria's former world and European figure-skating champion, announced the end of his active sports career to reporters here.

He said the combination of two shows of the American-produced Holiday On Ice revue would have obliged him by contract to perform for an eight-month period in Latin America. This would have been too much of a strain after years of show business stress.

'GOOD CURLING'

By MATT BALDWIN

Practice Is Concentration

Matt Baldwin was only 27 when he won the Canadian Curling Championship in 1954, the youngest skip ever to do so. That marked the turning point in the game, bridging the gap between the old timers and the modern concept. A brilliant shotmaker and daring skip who thumbed his nose at the book and the percentages, Baldwin went on to win three Briers. He still has some refreshing ideas and isn't afraid to speak out. His column will be a weekly feature in the Times during the curling season.

When you go to your curling club and see some players practising, almost invariably it will be the better players in the club. In curling as in all sports, practice makes perfect and that's why some curlers are better than others. They work harder at it

Regardless of how proficient you become as a shotmaker, you cannot tune yourself for a major event without ample practice sessions.

Twenty minutes a day, most days, could suffice, providing you have a worthwhile system of practising.

Some people like to play points, which gives them a wide variety of shots every day. But personally, I think they are on the wrong track. For one thing, I like to practice alone, Who is going to hold the broom for you? Well, you need him like you need to come up light with a takeout. Practice is a matter of complete concentration, especially on weight shots, and the least number of people around the better.

I pick out a spot on the ice or on the backboards, and deliver my rock with it serving as the broom. I concentrate on both broom and weight when I play my first stone. Then I attempt to duplicate it. The same shot should be tried at least four times, maybe eight or ten times without varying ice and weight.

The secret is that when you duplicate your shot, you know you are curling well. After all, if you use the same broom and weight, the rock should react the same each time. If you do make a mistake, remove the rock or ignore it.

The sequence I employ is eight out-turns, and then eight in-turns. Each day you practice, you should vary the spot you use for your broom. This will help you to hit the broom right up the handle at any point on the ice with either turn.

If possible, use ice that has been curled on. The pebble has been worn and your rock will react more faithfully than on freshly pebbled ice. On new ice, any straying from the broom can be misleading, especially for weight because your stone is passing over ice that has not been used.

If you wish, you may have someone hold the broom for you, but do not let him give you a variety of shots. Because you do not know the ice, it will come down to a guessing game for weight and broom.

This would defeat the real purpose of your practising and you would get just as much good from a club game.

There are only two basic reasons to practice. One is to perfect your delivery. The other is to find out if your mind and your delivery are working together.

When you practice to straighten out your delivery, your main concern is to make sure you have your body going right straight out at the broom.

You can tell you are doing this properly when your trailing foot remains in a straight line behind you during your delivery as opposed to swinging it out to the side.

I will tell you later how to fix this. Meanwhile if your leg does remain in a straight line, you are doing it right.

Magnificent Response To Ticehurst Tourney

There have been greater and more prestigious golf events in British Columbia than the Bert Ticehurst Memorial tournament at McCleery on Friday. But never has the response been more magnificent.

When Bert Ticehurst died of cancer earlier this year, the former Willingdon Cup player from Vancouver left a wife, three children and an estate that, at best, can be described as very modest.

John Russell, the Point Grey amateur who played on several Willingdon Cup teams with Bert, felt Ticehurst's family deserved more. The idea behind Friday's tournament was to establish a bursary for the Ticehurst children.

Friday's tournament on the mainland drew 135 players, at $50 a pop, and 90 "jockeys" — golfers who wished to be part of it but were unable to play.

About $3,400 in prizes, not including two special draws, were donated, mainly through the efforts of Point Grey professional Dick Munn, Russell and lawyer Ross Ellison.

The final accounting is yet to be determined, but the Ticehurst Bursary will realize almost $15,000.

Cowichan's Bill Wakeham, incidentally, won the low gross prize (there was no pro money offered) with a two-under-par 68. Wakeham's prize on the table turned out to be a sewing machine, which he promptly donated to Mrs. Ticehurst.

"I've never seen a happier 135 golfers in my life," said Wakeham. "There has never been, in British Columbia, a tournament quite like it."

It was, indeed, a magnificent effort.

Golfing pride also is being established today at Cedar Hill. Once regarded as the poor country cousin in the area, Cedar Hill has risen, in recent years, to a favorable position.

Admission into the Inter-Club League was the first big sign of recognition by "the Rest." It is significant that Cedar Hill won the Willie Park Driver this year because more "recognition" is coming to the Saanich course in 1974.

Cedar Hill will be used, for the first time, by Island Open competitors, as a site to determine the city junior men's championship, and by the ladies for their Victoria City tournament.

The women's tournament, while not yet confirmed, will be played June 17-24. The junior men will have the course May 18 and will wind up their 36-hole test the following day at Victoria Golf Club.

In addition, Cedar Hill will host the first round of match play in the Island Open on April 14. The Island Open will start April 7 with the qualifying round at Gorge Vale. The second round is on April 21 at Uplands, the quarter-finals April 28 at Victoria, the semi-finals May 5 at Glen Meadows and the finals at Colwood on May 12.

Other tentative 1974 dates drawn up at a meeting of the Victoria District Committee last week: City Intermediate championship March 23 (at Uplands) and March 24 (at Glen Meadows) and the City Men's Amateur June 2 (at Victoria) and June 9 (at Glen Meadows).

Some familiar names dominate the National Hockey League's individual scoring race today, but one of the early-season surprises is a team which does not have a player among the top 35 point getters.

While there is no surprise in the fact that centre Phil Esposito and right winger Ken Hodge of Boston Bruins lead the scoring race with 14 points each and that teammate Bobby Orr has 11, the early-season performance of Atlanta Flames has raised a few eyebrows.

In five games so far, the second-year Atlanta team has accomplished three things it didn't do last season—defeat Montreal Canadiens (4-2), Boston (5-4), and St. Louis (1-0).

The leading scorer with the Atlanta club is veteran right winger Leon Rochefort with five goals. He shares the team's point leadership with Reynald Comeau, who has one goal and four assists.

Meanwhile, attendance and not scoring is the big story in the World Hockey Association. Vancouver Blazers are setting a trend their WHA rivals would love to follow.

The blazers' franchise, shifted to Vancouver from Philadelphia, has already attracted 41,327 fans to Pacific Coliseum—an average of 10,332 a game or 66.4 per cent of capacity.

The biggest turnout to date was for a visit by Houston when 12,186 showed up to welcome the Aeros' Howe family —Gordie and sons Mark and Marty.

Vancouver's Danny Lawson, with a league-leading seven goals, is runner-up with 11 points.

New York Succumbs To Long-Range Firing

By The Canadian Press

One couldn't blame New England Whalers if they fired a few shots at goalie Joe Junkin from their own end Monday night.

It was that kind of a night for the 27-year-old netminder who gave up goals from 80, 45 and 30 feet as the Whalers took a 4-1 victory over New York Golden Blades.

The win, before 4,397 fans in Boston Garden, enabled the Whalers to take over sole possession of first place in the East Division with 11 points, two more than idle Cleveland Crusaders.

The Blades remained in a fifth-place tie with Toronto Toros in the East, both with four points.

Hugh Harris opened the scoring with his second goal, a 35-foot drive that eluded Junkin in the first period. Less than three minutes later, Paul Hurley beat Junkin with an 80-foot shot.

Brad Selwood increased New England's lead to 3-0 on a 45-foot drive early in the second and John French got the final goal for the winners on a power play.

Mike Laughton ruined goalie Al Smith's bid for a shutout when he scored his fthird goal of the season on a breakaway at 6:19 of the third period.

Smith stopped 29 shots Monday night, including 14 in the second period. New England fired 43 shots at Junkin.

Successful Night For Boxing Clubs

Both London Boxing Club teams opened the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League season with victories Monday at Royal Oak Junior High School.

The Senior squad bounced Merchants 108-62 in the first game and the Junior team edged Independents 91-88 with a comeback rush in the second encounter.

Juniors trailed through most of the game but rallied in the closing stages.

Leafs Trip Sockeyes

RICHMOND—It's becoming obvious why Victoria Maple Leaf manager Doug Anderson was anxious to sign Gordie Dumont for the current Pacific International Junior Hockey League season.

Dumont, who counted 44 goals and 50 assists for Nanaimo Clippers of the B.C. Junior League last season, elected to join the newly-formed Leafs and concentrate on his Grade 12 studies.

Monday night here, Dumont scored twice—his second two-goal performance in as many games—to spark Leafs to a 4-2 victory over Richmond Sockeyes.

The win levelled Leafs' record to 3-3 after a slow start in which they lost their two opening games.

Leafs fell behind 2-1 in the first period but rallied for the triumph by scoring the only goal of the second before Dumont bagged the winner. Kevin Woodburn and Bob Boyd were the other Victoria marksmen while Steve Leatham picked up three assists.

Vic Malli went the distance in the Leaf nets, turning aside 28 shots, while Sockeye goaltender Ron Patterson made 20 saves.

TRAINER SUSPENDED AT EXHIBITION PARK

VANCOUVER (CP) — Win A Shot, winner of the ninth race Oct. 15 at Exhibition Park, has tested positive for a forbidden pain-killer and trainer E. W. Russell Jr. has been suspended 30 days.

The horse tested positive in the post-race urine sample for phenylbutazone, an analgesic known as bute and illegal for racing purposes in British Columbia.

Russell is suspended for 30 days, to Nov. 14 from Oct. 16, at all North American race tracks.

City's Second Entry Waiting for Decision

Two new entries have been admitted to the Northwest International Men's Fastball League and four other teams, including a second from Victoria, are sitting and waiting on the front porch.

Admitted to the league at a weekend meeting in Seattle were New Westminster Royals and Longview, Wash.

Applications by four franchise seekers will be reviewed at a meeting Dec. 2 in Bellingham.

Presentation for membership was submitted by Yakima Oles, Portland Pay-N-Pak, New Westminister Russell Hotel and Victoria Athletics, headed by former player Jim Moody.

Signifying intentions to return are Victoria Bates, Seattle Pay-N-Pak, Abbotsford Merchants and Shelton.

Team sponsor Herb Bate revealed that Victoria's holdover entry will be sponsored by Langford Rentals for the coming season, and a decision on a new nickname will be made shortly.

Although in control of a franchise, Shelton's return to the fold is indefinite. A final commitment from Shelton also will be made at the Dec. 2 meeting.

Players Request Clough's Return

DERBY, England (Reuter) — Derby County soccer players called today for the reinstatement of manager Brian Clough, who resigned last week after a row with the club's chairman and directors.

England defender Roy McFarland, the Derby captain, handed club chairman Sam Longson a letter signed by all first-team players saying that they were "unanimous in our support and respect" for Clough and his assistant Peter Taylor, who also resigned.

Clough and Taylor quit when Longson told Clough to curb his outside work for television and newspapers.

Under Clough's leadership, Derby rose from the depths of the second division to win the first division title two seasons ago and is currently third in the standings behind Leeds United and Burnley.

Runners Extend Victory Streaks

Ulla Hansen and Tom Griffin, Victoria's brightest hopes for age-class championships in the Canadian cross-country championships next month, continue to have it their own way in the Senior High School Cross- Country League.

Both running for Mt. Douglas, Hansen and Griffin recorded their fourth straight victories as the league reached the halfway mark of its schedule Monday.

Miss Hansen covered the 1.7-mile course at Beaver Lake in 11 minutes, 31 seconds to finish eight seconds ahead at Jill McLeod of Claremont. Sharon Doherty of Esquimalt finished third, 14 seconds behind the winner.

Griffin recorded an excellent time of 17 minutes, 31 seconds to win the 3.4-mile boys' race. Brian Blamey of Oak Bay finished second and Mike Long of Mt. Douglas third.

Claremont edged Mt. Doug for the girls' team event honor with Esquimalt third. Mt. Douglas, Belmont and Claremont finished 1-2-3 in the boys' team standing.

The national championships, expected to attract about 500 competitors, will be staged on the Beaver Lake course Nov. 17.

B.C. Pen 'Ready to Blow Up'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A combination of angry, frustrated prisoners and unhappy, frightened guards is creating an explosive situation inside the British Columbia penitentiary.

"This place could blow up anytime," reported one guard Monday.

His words were echoed by John Reynolds, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, who described the 94-year-old maximum security institution as a "very tense, very scared prison" following a weekend tour.

The troubled institution was the scene of a riot Oct. 5 when prisoners smashed a block of cells to protest lack of recreational facilities.

Reynolds, a long-time critic of conditions at the penitentiary, whose walls almost abut his riding, called on Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, the federal minister responsible for penitentiaries administration, to initiate an independent investigation of the prison, which overlooks the Fraser River on the eastern outskirts of New Westminster.

He said prison officials gave him full co-operation during his tour.

"Everything we asked to, we were allowed to see." He said the prison was "completely filthy" and cells damaged in the riot were not repaired.

"There was one whole row of cells — 13, if I remember the number correctly — with the walls broken through between the cells — four- or five-foot holes." He said sinks and toilets had been torn out, one cell set on fire and many windows broken.

The riot involved 89 of the nearly 600 prisoners.

Reynolds said the men involved in the riot are confined to their cells 24 hours a day. "The inmates are fed through their bars. They get two sandwiches three times a day."

"The guards are scared. They're afraid some more trouble could occur. And I saw some young people in there who were scared to death of the power system within the prison. And then there are the ones who are completely frustrated."

Herb Reynette, deputy regional director of the penitentiary services in Vancouver, investigated the riot and his report was sent to the commissioner of penitentiaries in Ottawa last week.

Reynolds said an investigation by an independent commission is needed.

"An inside inquiry tends to leave the feeling with the public that something hasn't been investigated, or that it's been covered up."

He said the commission should include "ordinary people with no expertise but good common sense."

Penitentiary Director F. R. Graves said he felt it should be left to the solicitor-general to decide whether an independent investigation is necessary.

Graves, who spent all day Monday visiting cell blocks and talking to guards and groups of prisoners, said all prisoners now are getting regular meals and exercise periods.

He said it was necessary to keep prisoners involved in the riot locked in their cells during the weekend because prisoners working in the kitchens "were pressured (by other prisoners) into refusing to work there." He said the men returned to the kitchens Monday.

A year ago the B.C. penitentiary local of the Public Service Alliance of Canada sent a sharply-worded letter to then solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer, complaining that overcrowding and prison policies had caused a drop in morale among guards. Built to handle 400 prisoners, the prison population rose to more than 600 in recent months but had been cut back to about 580 at the time of the riot.

Plans to scrap the aging prison have been on the books for years. A 1965 plan to build an $18-million prison near Mission, about 25 miles east of the present location, was halted in 1969 as a result of a government economy wave coupled with criticism that the new prison would be outmoded before it was built. Work now is in progress on a minimum-security facility at Mission.

A seven-man committee commissioned by the federal government in 1971 to study Canada's prison system gave replacement of the B.C. penitentiary top priority. The committee, headed by Dr. J. W. Mohr of Toronto, said there was an acute need for new maximum-security facilities in B.C.

The federal government said in March, 1972, that the penitentiary would be replaced as soon as possible by a number of smaller maximum-security institutions on the lower mainland.

Allmand admitted recently that the project was stalled because New Westminster and other communities are objecting to new prison facilities being built within their boundaries.

MPs ZERO IN ON NURSE PAY

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government — balking at paying a fair increase in wages for nurses working in its Veterans' Hospitals — should not be so ready to raise the salaries of its senior deputy ministers to $60,000 a year.

This point was made in the Commons Monday by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) when the cabinet was peppered with questions from the opposition members over the pay complaints of the nurses working in Veterans' Hospitals.

They are protesting bitterly that the salary increase awarded to them by arbitration after a dispute with the government, is well below the salaries paid to nurses working for provincial governments or in municipal hospitals. They want equal rates of pay to those received by the other nurses.

The question has been up in the Commons on three different days this week and last week. Dan McKenzie (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) first raised it in the House. The issue was picked up in the Commons Monday by several other opposition members as newspapers carried reports of nurses staying away from work, reporting off sick.

Knowles urged Privy Council President Allan MacEachen to take up with the Public Service staff Relations Board the possibility of having the salary award reviewed. He noted that there were reports that the cabinet was accepting a recommendation that there be salary increases for senior deputy ministers raising their total pay to $50,000 and $60,000 a year, depending upon their rank.

The Winnipeg member said if the cabinet was prepared to be that generous its top salaried employees it should be prepared to grant the modest request of the nurses.

MacEachen promised to discuss the matter with the chairman of the board.

$10M United Way

Funds raised by the Greater Victoria United Way appeal in its 36 years of existence passed the $10 million mark this month.

To celebrate, nine former appeal chairmen gathered Monday with this year's chairman, Murray Glazier, for a roast beef luncheon at the Union Club.

"That year we spent as chairmen of the United Appeal was one of the best years of our lives," said Phoebe Noble, who was joint chairman with her husband Jack in 1966.

The "esprit de corps" of all the volunteers made the long hours of work worth it, she said.

She added that before she became co-chairman, the United Appeal executive held a special meeting to decide whether they would allow a woman chairman.

Only one other woman chairman, Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell, ran the appeal in 1972.

Dowell had the roughest year as chairman last year, said Glazier, partly because of criticism by Premier Dave Barrett of the fund drive method of financing social agencies.

The 1972 appeal missed its goal of $725,000 by about $125,000. The four appeals before it also missed their targets.

They started the 1937 campaign with a capacity public meeting at the Royal Theatre and ended up with $6,000 over their $86,191 objective, said McGregor.

BLACK CREPE veils worn by Vancouver members of the Status of Women Action Group indicate mourning for the Canadian Bill of Rights, which they say died by a decision of the Supreme Court of Canada. Judges ruled against an Indian woman who loses her status by marrying a white, and SWAG claims discrimination because an Indian male marrying a white retains his rights.

And If It's Hot, The Gov't Owns It

Legislation introduced by Mines Minister Leo Nimsick establishes all forms of geothermal energy resources as the sole property of the province.

Geo-thermal resources, Nimsick explained, consist of the use of the earth's heat — through steam or other sources — to produce energy.

"This bill places geo-thermal energy resources under the crown so that no one else can have them," Nimsick told reporters after he had introduced the legislation.

Other jurisdictions such as New Zealand and California have begun using geo-thermal resources for an energy source.

"We feel that there are several areas in B.C. where geothermal energy can be found. He said the Lillooet area is one site in mind.

B.C. Hydro is carrying out a feasibility study.

The bill consisting only of two sections and a title, stipulates that underground reservoirs of heat that may be exploited, developed or used for the production of heat energy are the sole jurisdiction of the crown.

Liquor Sale Ban Considered

The provincial cabinet will consider the request of a protest group demanding the removal of all South African and Portuguese alcoholic beverages from B.C. liquor store shelves.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said he will discuss the request with cabinet, adding he sympathizes with the protest.

Eight members of the Vancouver Southern Africa Action Coalition met the NDP caucus Monday afternoon and asked for the ban as a concrete expression of moral support for the people of South Africa.

Macdonald said "there is no question about the discrimination in South Africa and the Portuguese colonies" and he supported the boycott of goods from those countries.

He added, however, that to ban the products would involve a question of civil liberties in that the government would be "censuring other people's tastes and interests."

Objector Clause Stays in Bill 11

The NDP government firmly resisted opposition efforts to amend the religious conscience provisions of the Labor Code of B.C. Act Monday while the two Conservative members found themselves voting against each other.

During continued debate on clause-by-clause consideration of the labor legislation (Bill 11), a number of opposition amendments were voted down by the government majority. In more than 3½ hours of debate, only 11 sections of the 153-section bill got house approval and six sets of amendments were voted down.

The main amendment, moved by James Chabot (SC—Columbia River), would have seen religious objectors to union membership be allowed to contribute the equivalent of the union dues to the government for the administration of the labor legislation.

The legislation as it now stands provides that those persons who want to opt out of unions because of religious objections must continue to pay dues to the union.

Government spokesmen, including Premier Barrett and Labor Minister Bill King, argued that those persons who wish to opt out of unions should pay for improved working conditions and salaries they will be entitled to as members of an employee unit.

Barrett said "there has to be a penalty for stepping out of tune," and turned aside Social Credit criticism of the government stand by saying the Socred government had never permitted any debate on conscience clause legislation at any time.

Barrett said that if individuals are not happy with the way their unions are being run, they should attempt to change things from the inside.

King said there is no way the government is prepared to "let people off the hook as far as union dues are concerned."

He said trade unions are the organizations and tribunals of the working people of the province.

The labor minister said he considers most religious objectors to be sincere people. But the government would be setting a dangerous precedent by writing legislation which would permit minority groups to opt out of unions where the majority makes the decisions.

Chabot's amendment was defeated in a 31-15 vote, with the NDP government members crushing the combined forces of the Social Credit, Liberal and Progressive Conservative parties.

Minutes later, when the religious conscience section came up for a vote, Tories Scott Wallace and Hugh Curtis found themselves on opposite sides of the fence.

Curtis, MLA for Saanich and the Islands, sided with the government in approving the section while Wallace, interim party leader and MLA for Oak Bay, voted with the Social Credit and Liberal members against the section. The vote was 32-14.

In a related development, King introduced a number of minor amendments which have the effect of making the new Labor Relations Board report at least once a year to the minister of labor, who will then table the report in the legislature.

'WOMEN'S DAYS' SET

The government has set aside two days during which it will accept briefs and presentations from persons or groups interested in establishing priorities for women.

A special committee of the NDP caucus will hold two public hearings. The first is on Wednesday, Oct. 31 from 9 a.m. to noon and the second on Thursday, Nov. 8, at the same time. Both will be held in the Legislatiye Buildings.

Groups and individuals interested in appearing before the committee have been requested to contact committee secretary Colin Gabelmann (NDP—North Vancouver-Seymour).

EDMONTON (CP) — John Apsimon, a university professor from Ottawa, has been elected president of the Canadian Fencing Association.

Disaster Funds Dispersed

The provincial agricultural aid to developing countries and world disaster areas fund has granted $64,600 to four separate organizations for projects in Asia and Africa.

The Tibetan Refugee Aid Society will receive $25,000 to help support a children's village in India and Oxfam-Canada will receive $15,000 for an emergency agricultural works program to improve the irrigation in the Aurangabad district of Maharashtia in India.

A $14,600 grant goes to the Canadian Catholic Organization for development and peace to help resettle young men on their own farms in West Cameroon in Africa, and to purchase farm equipment in Ogidi, a farming village in Nigeria.

A further $10,000 goes to the Canadian Hunger Foundation to assist in the construction of ferro cement boats in Bangladesh to assist in transporting farm produce.

Land Tax Break If B.C. Buys It

Persons who donate their land to the crown or sell it to the province at substantially less than its market value will get a property tax break.

The amendments to the Taxation Act, introduced by Premier Dave Barrett in the legislature Monday, provide that those persons who either donate or sell their land at a saving to the government shall not be taxed as occupiers of the land if they are still living on it.

The legislation is retroactive to Dec. 31, 1972.

Other legislation introduced by Barrett provides that owners of mobile homes will be eligible for the provincial home acquisition scheme, $1,000 for new homes and grants of $500 to buyers of older homes.

Another section of the amendments to the Provincial Home Acquisition Act provides that armed forces personnel who have lived in the province for five years before being transferred out of B.C. will qualify for residency requirements attached to a government loan or grant on the purchase of an older home.

Paintings Have 'Action'

A three-week exhibition of sculptures by Vancouver artist D'Arcy Henderson starts next week at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Henderson's sculptures are made of fibreglass, plastic and polyester resin and are derived from "action painting", where the material dictates the eventual form of the piece.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. B.C. AND YUKON— YOUR POSTAL CODE IS HERE. AND IT'S BEAUTIFUL.

It's beautiful because it works. It gets you your mail faster than before because now a very fancy computer looks at a combination of numbers and letters and aims it right to your door.

It's beautiful because you can make funny memory rhymes with the Postal Code of your friends (how about this Ottawa code, for example: Ken once had one thought twice — for K1H 1T2?). Or songs. Or whatever.

And it's beautiful because it'll be good until at least 2001 without changes, unlike some we looked at in other countries.

We have sent you a kit containing your Postal Code, explanations, a postage paid address card and Postal Code stickers. In case you haven't received it, please write to your Post Office on a special card that will be sent to you. And when your friends start using your code, and you use theirs, everybody will communicate more easily.

K1H 1T2

K1H 1T2
1H — narrows the zone down to part of a city or rural area.

K1H 1T2
1T2 — defines the actual block or business

RESCUE SQUAD FINDS STRAYED HUNTER SAFE

PORT ALBERNI — RCMP said today a hunter reported missing Sunday was found safe Monday afternoon after spending a night in the bush.

A search launched Sunday and Monday involved 15 men, three vehicles, an RCMP helicopter and tracking dog.

Hikers from the Alberni Valley Rescue Squad located Harper at 4:20 p.m. on a ridge just opposite the rendezvous point.

RCMP said Harper was the second hunter who has become lost in the Ash River area in the past two weeks. Metro Lazorko, 41, of Port Alberni, spent a night in the bush after his compass broke.

Ottawa Lifts Pension Plan Ceilings

Times News Services

OTTAWA — National Revenue Minister Robert Stanbury announced today he was removing restrictions on private pension plans to allow them to respond to increases in the cost of living.

"Private pension plans will be allowed to provide and increase supplementary pension benefits to reflect fully the consumer price index," Stanbury said in a statement.

In the past, both private pension plans and the Canada Pension Plan could only increase by a maximum of two per cent per year to make up for any rise in the cost of living.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde reached an agreement with his provincial counterparts earlier this month to tie the Canada Pension Plan to the cost of living and Monday introduced a bill in the Commons to allow plan payments to increase with annual rises in the cost of living.

The bill also contains a catch-up clause which will make cost-of-living adjustments retroactive to 1967, the year recipients first started receiving benefits.

Welfare department officials say the catch-up clause will mean increases of at least eight per cent for people who started receiving benefits in 1972.

There will be a maximum increase of 20 per cent for those who have been receiving benefits since 1967.

The bill also increases annual maximum pensionable earnings to $6,600 in 1974 and $7,500 in 1975, from $5,600 this year.

Hijackers Trade Captives for Cuba

YACUIBA, Boliyia (UPI) — Four Tupamaro guerrillas released their last five hostages from a hijacked Argentine jetliner Monday and surrendered under a deal for safe conduct to Cuba.

"They treated us and all the other passengers courteously," said Ernesto Campos, an Argentine legislator who was among the last hostages freed.

Campos, another Argentine congressman, a French scientist and the pilot and co-pilot were threatened with death by the group.

The four guerrillas, two men and two well-dressed women, hijacked the Aerolinas Argentinas 737 jetliner over northern Argentina Saturday morning. The plane made an emergency landing at Yacuiba, but was too big to take off again on the tiny grass landing strip.

Bolivian authorities announced that the four hyjackers would leave Bolivia in the next 24 hours.

Bourassa Swipes At PQ Figures

MONTREAL (CP) — The already-heated battle of the budget warmed up another few degrees Monday as both the Liberals and Parti Quebecois prepared to release documents they said back their respective stands on the feasibility of Quebec independence.

Premier Bourassa told an election meeting the Parti Quebecois budget for an independent Quebec under-estimated by more than two per cent the percentage of federal spending in the province.

In 1971-72, the province received nearly 26 per cent of federal spending, not 22.4 per cent as the Parti Quebecois's proposed budget claims, he told a Quebec City election meeting.

A Parti Quebecois spokesman here said party leader Rene Levesque and economic adviser Jacques Parizeau would release a government document dealing with foreign investment in Quebec.

The document was prepared for the industry and commerce department, the spokesman said, but never was made public.

It would have "very considerable" bearing on the Parti Quebecois budget, focal point so far in the campaign for the Oct. 29 Quebec general election.

Union Nationale leader Gabriel Loubier said a vote for the Liberals is a vote "for the slavery of Quebec under the central government . . . under the arrogance of Prime Minister Trudeau."

Bourassa and Levesque continued their running battle over independence, main issue in the campaign since the election was called Sept. 25.

Bourassa said a document on the economics of federalism will be released as soon as possible in response to challenges by Levesque, who said the government was hiding documents concerning the costs and benefits of federalism.

Of total federal spending in 1971-72 of $18.130 billion, Bourassa said $4.723 billion was spent in Quebec.

The fact that the PQ was out by more than two per cent on this figure is only one of the shortcomings in that party's budget that will be shown by the document, Bourassa said.

Meanwhile, Levesque told more than 1,500 University of Montreal students his party must take power in either this or the following election.

French-speaking Montrealers are becoming submerged in a melting pot because of federal immigration policies, he said.

LATEST of Company One Theatre's original creations is Future Choice, a set of three stories derived from science fiction concepts. The show will be performed Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Victoria Art Gallery under the artistic direction of Carl Hare. Seen here are Bill Murdoch and Marie Cadieux in one of the stories entitled Lira. The company will embark on an extended tour of eastern Canada in January.

Senior Citizens Want Project Halted

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 100 people, many of them elderly, trooped into Vancouver's Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation offices Monday to demand a halt in plans for a $2-million senior citizens' housing project in the city.

The delegation told local CMHC officials that the 13-storey building will provide inferior housing and "erode the quality of the area" in which it is being built.

Delegation spokesman Mrs. Jean MacIsaac said the high-rise design of the building would mean elderly occupants of upper floors could be trapped in case of fire.

'Hanoi Hilton' Nears Reality

TOKYO (WP) — Japanese business interests have begun negotiations to build a real "Hanoi Hilton" — a 300 room, $2 million international hotel which will be one of the largest buildings in North Vietnam.

According to business sources here, the new hotel was proposed by North Vietnamese authorities as one of the early projects of the planned Japanese foreign assistance program in that country.

Japan and North Vietnam established relations in Paris about a month ago.

Despite its role as a logistical base for U.S. forces fighting in South Vietnam, Japan has pledged aid to all the war-torn countries of Indochina, including the communist north.

According to officials of Shinwa Bussan Trading Company here, the hotel project proposed by North Vietnamese officials would be a six-storey structure complete with conference rooms, restaurants, swimming pool, post office, bank and a shopping arcade for foreign tourists.

The target date for completions is said to be June, 1975.

North Vietnam's only hostelry for foreigners at present has about 40 rooms. Part of the proposed hotel would be occupied by the Japanese Embassy in Hanoi, according to sources here.

VANCOUVER NURSES STAY OUT

Their action is part of a nation-wide three-day protest organized by the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada on behalf of 2,200 nurses employed in federal institutions.

Only about 40 of the 200 nurses on staff at Shaughnessy stayed away from work Monday as they stuck to their pledge of maintaining essential services at the hospital.

"We're not trying to strip the wards of people," said Kay Wyman, chairman of the Vancouver Nurses' Chapter of the Professional Institute.

"We've got a great list of nurses who would report sick if we let them, but there are a lot of wards at the hospital and we have to keep somebody on all the time."

Shaughnessy spokesman, Dr. C. C. Covernton, said the absence of nurses caused cancellation of several operations Monday and the hospital is restricting admission to emergency patients until the protest ends Wednesday.

Otherwise, the hospital is running normally, he said. Vancouver nurses voted 115 to 62 Sunday to participate in the protest.

Marchand Moving On Boxcar Crisis

OTTAWA (FP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand will meet with representatives of the railways this week to discuss the chronic shortages of box cars that have developed in Canada.

Appointment of a transport czar has been called for by the official opposition.

Complaints were raised in the Commons Monday over the boxcar problem.

Otto Lang, justice minister and minister in charge of Wheat Board, met in Montreal last week with the railways and with members of the board.

He was not in the House Monday but Marchand said he would confer with the minister later to learn what progress had been made towards improving the supply of box cars for the movement of grain.

Meantime he plans a meeting Thursday with the railways. He will discuss with them the shortages of boxcars to move lumber in British Columbia as well as the shortage of box cars for moving grain.

Already opposition members have urged government action calling for the appointment of a transportation co-ordinator to ensure the utilization of a transportation coordinator to ensure the utilization of all available boxcars in the rail system to haul grain.

Jack Murta (PC-Lisgar) said government action was needed immediately. He urged Ottawa to appoint a transport co-ordinator.

Pickets Protest 7% Offer

Federal clerical workers demonstrated their anger today at a 7 per cent salary increase offer over three years with informational picketing across the country.

Targets in Victoria included the federal building at Yates and Government, the Unemployment Insurance Commission on Douglas, the taxation and manpower offices on Vancouver and dockyard.

The picketing, carefully timed to coincide with lunch hours, marked the first day of arbitration hearings in Ottawa to decide a new contract for 59,000 employees in the clerical and regulatory group, including between 1,500 and 2,000 in Greater Victoria.

The clerical group was offered pay raises of 3 per cent in the first year of the contract and 2 per cent in each of the second and third.

Also in dispute, and referred to arbitration, are hours of work, overtime, vacations, shift premiums and a number of other issues.

The group voted earlier to give up the right to strike in favor of arbitration.

Tom Dalzell, regional representative for the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said today he doubted the group would vote for arbitration of the next contract dispute after the experience with the present negotiations but this would depend on the results of the arbitration.

"We're sick with the offer," he said.

The pickets handed out a one-page bulletin saying they don't seek to lead the way in pay and benefits but would like to hold their own in the face of the rapidly rising cost of living.

The bulletin described the treasury board's pay offer as "the most unkind cut of all" because Statistics Canada has reported the cost of living increased 8.3 per cent in the last 12-month period.

"Food, which amounts to a proportionately greater amount of low income budget, has increased by 16 per cent in the same period," the bulletin said.

As a result, the clerical and regulatory group was "being offered a cut in pay for each of three years."

The bulletin, which said the treasury board was "quite serious" in its offer, suggested there was no intention of arriving at an agreement in negotiations but simply to let the arbitrator make the decision.

Hydro Lines Up Meetings

B.C. Hydro, along with the Capital Region District will hold a public meeting in Victoria Nov. 14 to discuss alternate routes for two future transmission lines between Victoria and the Qualicum area.

Similar meetings will be held at Nanaimo Nov. 7, Parksville Nov. 8 and Duncan Nov. 22.

The first of the two 90-mile high-voltage transmission lines will be required by 1977 and the second by the early 1980s. They will form the backbone of a new Island power system to meet electricity needs for the next 25 or 30 years, Hydro said today.

The meetings will give a preliminary assessment of several alternate routes for the new lines as seen by Hydro and will open discussion between the authority and those affected by the project before final routing decisions are made.

Follow-up meetings will be held early next year after consultants have completed their studies and others interested have had a chance to study effects of alternate routes.

Mine Given Extra Time To Clean Up

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Pollution Control Board has rejected an appeal by Jordan River Mines Ltd. for eased pollution controls but has granted the company six more months to meet the original tougher regulations.

The copper mine 35 miles west of Victoria, which has been plagued with problems since it was reactivated over two years ago, must discharge its tailings 1,500 feet offshore at a minimum depth of 40 feet, as ordered earlier.

But the Oct. 15 deadline has been extended to April 30 next year, board chairman Walter Raudsepp has advised the company in a letter ruling on the mine's latest appeal.

In Vancouver today mine manager Edward Bettiol said the only problem which might arise meeting that deadline could come from rough seas when the time comes to lay the discharge pipe.

The discharge or slurry, powdered rock left after mineral extraction, is being dumped about 500 feet offshore, producing what Bettiol called turbidity or "visual pollution."

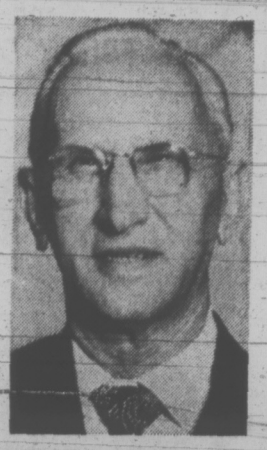
The company had been having trouble maintaining the necessary velocity in the discharge system, leading it to silt up and causing the mine to shut down and lay men off, he said.

The board, in ruling on the company appeal, ordered it to submit final plans for the required discharge system by the end of this year or shut down.

Troubles over mine effluent began even before the former Cowichan Copper Mine was reactivated. In June of 1971 William Venables, the provincial director of pollution control, rejected the mine's application for a permit to discharge up to a million gallons of slurry into Juan de Fuca Strait.

The company appealed that decision to the Pollution Control Board which ruled it could have a permit if it met tough control standards to be set by Venables, including the 1,500-foot outfall.

Last May there were complaints tailings were fouling the nearby beaches and a break in the pipe was subsequently discovered.



HOLLICK

Realtor In Race Against Pollen

William Hollick, a 61-year-old city businessman with no previous political experience, today announced he will oppose Mayor Peter Pollen in the Nov. 17 mayoralty race.

Hollick, principal of a real estate company, said if he is elected "we will have better public relations with builders, contractors and developers."

He said Pollen's two-year term has been marked by three lawsuits against the city over development issues, and businessmen generally "are not very happy" with the state of affairs at City Hall.

Hollick, who insisted he is a serious candidate, despite his lateness in mounting a campaign, claimed Pollen has accomplished nothing in the past two years except produce an increase in taxes.

"They are fighting among themselves. Let's face it, there is dissension down there. How are they going to accomplish anything?" he told reporters at a hastily-called press conference in his office at 1118 Quadra.

As a "full-time working mayor," Hollick said he hopes to bring unity and harmony to city council and instigate more efficient operation of all city services.

Other points in his platform:

—To keep down property taxes. ("The taxpayers' principal concern is taxes.")

—Construction of a convention centre which, he claimed, can be done at no cost to taxpayers under a plan he declined to reveal.

Hollick, who lives at 2545 Lansdowne, said he has been a resident of Victoria for 30 years at his business premises. The small-panelled office, decorated with driftwood and a large plastic plant, lies in the shadow of the highrise building erected by Vancouver developer G. F. Mulek.

THEY DIDN'T IGNORE EXPLOSIVE ISSUE

There were 16 tons and it was too explosive a matter to be ignored by police.

The matter was settled Monday in provincial court when W.A.M. Drilling and Blasting Co. was fined $100 for illegally storing 32,000 pounds of explosives.

Operator William Alexander Morris, 32, of 2665 Sooke Road, pleaded guilty. Colwood RCMP said the explosives were found July 19 in a magazine on private property in Colwood.

At the time of the offence, Morris had a licence to store only 150 pounds.

Morris told the court he now has received a licence to store 32,000 pounds.

$50,000 Expansion Planned at Academy

An estimated $50,000 in renovations will be made at Victoria Riding Academy, manager Don Carley said today.

Carley said he has been stalling on improvements to the academy for two years as a result of Oak Bay council's indecision over what to do with the 9.38-acre site, owned by the municipality.

At a regular council meeting Monday first three readings were given a bylaw designating the land as a recreation-club zone to be used only for a riding academy.

The new bylaw, which follows council's Oct 9 decision to refuse the provincial government's offer to purchase the land for $900,000, will be discussed at a public hearing Nov. 5.

Carley said repairs to the existing buildings, which he said are worth $70,000, have been delayed because the land has been rented on a month-to-month basis.

He intends to ask for a six to 10-year lease before making any major renovations.

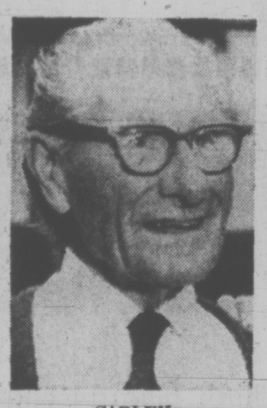
Plans include:

—an indoor riding ring occupying 1,600 square feet to replace the existing 800-square-foot ring;

—a 37,500-square-foot outdoor ring bordered by a fence 300 feet long and four feet high;

—paint existing buildings.

About 75 horses are boarded at the academy which is used by 350 people, said Carley. There are 10 employees.



CARLEY
. . . wants long lease

Carley explained $50,000 is his estimate of the proposed renovation costs and the exact amount he will be able to pour into the academy will depend on the taxes.

Mayor Frances Elford said council is bound by the Municipal Act to impose taxes on land leased for commercial use.

Carley has been operating since 1969 on a month-to-month basis and has not had to pay taxes, she said.

Elford was against giving third reading to the bylaw and would liked to have seen the matter tabled to allow time to discuss it with Carley.

Free Buses Ruled Out

A system of free transit in downtown Victoria and Vancouver — similar to that being tried in Seattle — has been ruled out by the provincial Bureau of Transit.

Director Victor Parker said Monday "other systems" to encourage use of public transit are being considered.

"We are very interested in what they are doing in Seattle and we're keeping an eye on it but you can accomplish all that Seattle is doing and more simply by developing some kind of a pass system," he said.

Such a pass system, or other methods of prepaying for transit, are being considered by the provincial transit agency, he said.

Parker described Seattle's free buses, in which fares are paid when buses leave a 105-block downtown core, as "cumbrous".

Meanwhile, occupancy in transit buses in downtown Seattle has increased by 50 per cent since fares were abolished Sept. 9, according to Carle H. Salley, operations director of Metro Transit Services.

No evaluation has yet been made of the number of cars removed from the streets of the 105-block area as a result of the free bus service, Salley said. But an "intensified study" of the system and its social and environmental impact should provide that figure next July.

Students Don't Like The Name

The name Saanich community secondary school isn't going down so well with Mt. View senior secondary students.

About 80 per cent of the students don't like the name, student council president Liborio Nanni said today.

Many would prefer to leave the name of the new school at Burnside and Acorn, due to be finished in late 1974 or early 1975, as Mt. View senior secondary, he said.

The present Mt. View building at 3814 Carey is going to be transformed into Mt. View junior secondary in 1975, with an enrolment of 490.

Senior high students now going to Mt. View will become part of Saanich community school, they may spend the first few months of the 1974-75 school year in the Mt. View building before moving to the new school.

Nanni said the name Saanich community school sounds too institutional.

Mt. View students will probably petition or write to Greater Victoria school board trustees asking that the name be changed, he said.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me when and why the 49th parallel was chosen as the border between Canada and the United States?—M.D.

A. It was chosen in 1846. It was first suggested by the United States in 1818 but Britain opposed the proposal as it would deprive it of the Oregon country then in the hands of the Hudson's Bay Co. Later the U.S. claimed the Pacific Coast territory as far north as the southern boundary of Alaska at the 54th parallel and threatened to fight for the territory. The U.S. finally accepted its original proposal to extend the boundary along the 49th parallel.

Q. Could you please tell me if we have a "harvest moon" month in September or October? D.M.

A. The Weather Office advises that full moons in September and October are sometimes referred to as "harvest moons," indicating bright nights to finish off harvests. But there is no definite reference to a harvest moon month. A hunters' moon is referred to, however, on Oct. 11.

Boy Charged After Hoax Phone Call

Mrs. Haight contacted B.C. Telephone, who traced the call.

A number was obtained and when police investigated they found a 13-year-old boy.

TOO MANY LIONS TO SUIT THE DRAGON

There were too many lions to suit the Dart Coon Club and their dragon.

While the Victoria Chinatown's Lions Club raised $6,800 for charity Saturday from the Lantern Festival and pageant in Central Junior High, the Dart Coon Club was celebrating its 58th anniversary with a traditional dragon dance on Fisgard.

The festival drew 2,500 and there was a large turnout for the Dart Coon celebrations but there was no connection between the two events as stated in the Times Monday.

LEVI'S CAR HIT

A man was injured and $1,900 damages done when a car went out of control and collided with two parked cars in the 1300 block Rockland Monday night.

Driver of the car Richard L. Bern, 1083 Redfern was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital, treated for injuries to his left arm, wrist and right leg, and released.

One of the parked cars was a government vehicle used by Norman Levi, minister of human resources. The other belonged to a Victoria man, James F. Bussey.

Kids Intimidating Parents

A new trend in relations between parents and teen-agers is marked by intimidation, says Miss Mary Reistroffer, associate professor of social worker at the University of Wisconsin.

"Many parents are afraid and intimidated by their kids," she said in an interview here.

The tremendous number of teen-agers who run away from home is an example of such acting out, she believes. In previous generations running away from home usually was only a threat.

Teen-agers are likely to do more than threaten these days because of the growth of communications.

"The outside world is readily available. Turn on a television and there you are in Beirut. The outside isn't so frightening."

At the same time, the former "persuasive influence" of the parent has been lost.

"You can be a good and responsible and conscientious parent but you can't control the exposure your child gets outside your own front door," Miss Reistroffer says.

As a result pressure from a teen-ager's peers are often as strong and, in some cases, stronger than pressure from parents.

The new spirit is indicated in the experience of foster care agencies in North America who have noted an increase in the number of self-referrals by teen-agers who come in "to see what we have to offer" having failed to reach accord with their own parents.

Miss Reistroffer is in Victoria to lead a two-day seminar sponsored by the provincial department of human resources and the B.C. Foster Parents' Association.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: This is a plea for churches to consider women counsellors. Your statement: "When a secretary starts crying on her boss's shoulder, she frequently winds up in his arms," was very, very true. The same could apply to ministers.

There have been more heartaches caused by women crying on their ministers' shoulders than anyone can imagine. Ask any minister's wife, and she will tell you (if she is honest) that many women have taken their problems to their clergymen and after several sessions of unburdening themselves they tell the minister they are in love with HIM!

Ministers are only human, and some are flattered, and some even try to console the troubled women in some very unethical ways.

The problem could be eliminated if the minister consulted with his female parishioners a time or two, and then turned them over to a woman for further counselling. — One Who Has Seen Much.

DEAR ONE: Your suggestion is an excellent one. It would lighten the burden of many an overworked clergyman. And his wife would appreciate it, too.

DEAR ABBY: I manage a large furniture store, and my problem is how to handle wild kids whose parents bring them along when they come to shop. These roughnecks tear off our price tags, pull out drawers, leaving them on the floor, and they actually jump from one sofa to the next. Most of the time the parents look the other way. When I ask the child not to do these things, many of the parents get insulted and leave.

Should I put up a sign stating that we welcome children, however, we run a furniture store not a recreational park, and parents will be charged for any damage done by their children?

How would you handle this situation? Harried.

DEAR HARRIED: Forget the sign. If a child proceeds to abuse your merchandise, advise the parents that they will be held responsible for damage by their children. And if damage is done, sock it to 'em!

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the man who was seriously injured in an automobile accident and had the local funeral home people "call on him" while he was still in bad shape in the hospital, reminded me of my own experience.

Six months ago I suddenly lost my husband. That was bad enough, but before he was even buried I got a "sympathy card" from a man who sells real estate. I hardly knew this man. He had written on the card: "If you want to sell your house, let me know."

I reported him to the real estate company he worked for, and now I notice he is trying to sell cars.—Angry.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "B AND F" IN SAN DIEGO: Show me a married couple who boast that they have never had an argument, and I'll show you a pair of lovebirds — complete with birdbrains. It's not humanly possible for two thinking people to always be in complete agreement on everything, but how they handle their differences can make or break a marriage.

Nurse McCarty? She Delivers

DEER ISLE, Me. (AP) — Elaine McCarty is a new breed of nurse, delivering a new kind of comprehensive health care to the 2,500 people on this island off the Maine coast.

Most of the islanders rely on the former army nurse for their health needs.

Miss McCarty, who served in Vietnam, is one of a handful of highly trained family nurse practitioners scattered throughout the United States, serving areas too isolated or too poor to have their own doctor.

"Many of the people here are elderly and chronically ill, and a lot of the work is educating them," Miss McCarty said.

"You help them understand their illnesses, how it will run and what symptoms they can expect.

"It's not really very dramatic health care," she said.

But before she came here last summer, illnesses and injuries usually meant a 35-mile drive to the nearest hospital at the mainland town of Blue Hill, reached by a causeway and bridge.

Now Miss McCarty is available on a 24-hour basis, both at the new Island Medical Centre and on a house call basis. She sees an average of 15 patients a day.

Some calls are down mile-long rugged dirt tracks where she's been stuck in snow and mired in mud.

As a family nurse practitioner, she is allowed to perform limited diagnosing and prescribing of medicine.

Miss McCarty completed her two years training to become a registered nurse, then took a bachelor's degree in nursing at Boston College.

In 1968-69, she was head nurse in the receiving room of an army evacuation hospital at Da Nang, and later went to the University of Colorado in Denver where she earned a master's degree in health care. The family nurse practitioner program was developed at the university, and Miss McCarty spent a year there.

In addition to manning the medical centre and making house calls, Miss McCarty conducts well child, pap smear and family planning clinics.

On a recent afternoon, she made one of her regular calls at the home of a 96-year-old man, visited a bed-ridden elderly woman, treated an injured fisherman, examined a patient with a persistent couch, gave a smallpox shot, visited a cancer patient and made an appointment to give a student a college entrance physical.

She and a dentist share the two-level Island Medical Centre which the island's two towns — Stonington and Deer Isle — built in an unsuccessful effort to attract a full-time doctor.

A closed-circuit television system links the centre to Blue Hill Memorial Hospital and its seven physicians. When patients need more extensive medical attention, they are put in front of the centre's television camera and Miss McCarty uses the system for consultation.

You Wouldn't Believe . . .

I am admittedly an astonishingly gullible person. The following, however, is a list of phrases that even I tend not to believe:

Child: "So what if this is the last turnpike exit for 57 miles. I said I don't have to go."

Husband: "Of course I'm not going to fall asleep. I'm just going to lie here for ten minutes and rest my eyes."

Friends: "Listen, any time you're in the neighborhood, be sure to drop in."

Husband: "He'll grow out of it. He's only two."

Husband: "Don't call a repairman. I can fix the toaster blindfolded."

Mother-in-law: "He's still in diapers? I had his father completely trained when he was six months old."

Husband: "He'll outgrow it. He's only seven."

Child: "And I promise that I'll clean his cage every single day."

Pantyhose package: "One size fits all — 95 to 165 pounds."

Husband: "What do you mean, it's six o'clock and you want to stop already? Why, I'm just hitting my stride! Don't worry, there will be lots of motels with vacancies at nine o'clock."

Child: "He followed me home."

Husband: "Of course I don't need glasses. It's just that this wise guy publisher is trying to save money by using microscopic print."

Husband: "I mean it. I don't want anything for my birthday."

Child: "And I promise that I'll practice an hour every day."

Creamed Corn Soup European Favorite

By MARY MOORE

When I was in England this summer I was served cream of corn soup 2 or 3 times. It seems to be a favourite.

I decided to make it on my return. Recently I had a guest who is on a non-residue diet, so I decided to make cream of corn soup. I served it as it is below to most of us but strained the serving for our guest with the stomach upset. She loved it.

CREAM OF CORN SOUP

1 c. diced cooked potato
2 slices side bacon chopped
1 medicum onion chopped
2 c. milk
one 14-oz. can cream style corn ½ tsp. salt
shake of pepper.

Cook about 2 medium potatoes in their skins first to get your 1 cup when peeled and diced.

In large pot saute the chopped bacon and onion very gently, stirring constantly, until onions are limp. Neither bacon or onion should be browned at all or it will spoil the colour of the finished soup.

Now add the milk, corn, salt, pepper and prepared potatoes and bring to simmering point and serve topped with croutons or a sprinkling of finely chopped parsley.

Note to patients on non-residue diets: Before serving force the soup through strong strainer and reheat this puree. I could not decide which variation I liked better. Quite candidly I think the pureed version had a more professional finish.

If you are eager to reduce air pollution or at least not to increase it, there is much you can do.

The six-page folder Air Pollution Explained: What You Can Do will guide you along the way. It points out that since cars are responsible for more than half of all urban air pollution, you could use public transportation or join a car pool. You could also ride a bike or walk short distances. If you must use your car, check whether the pollution controls are working properly and have regular engine tune-ups. Also, get used to switching off the motor while you park, even for only a few minutes.

Power plants that use coal and oil also create pollution. By using less electricity you can help to minimize power plant pollution. Turn off lights, radio and television when they are not needed. And, if you can, dry your clothes in the apen air instead of the dryer.

To reduce pollution from home heating, keep the windows closed during the winter months and have your heating system checked every year. The leaflet also suggests you set the thermostat at 68 or 70 degrees and wear a sweater if you feel cold.

Of course, alone you can't achieve very much. But by joining others who have the same goal, you can work together for more efficient pollution control and stricter inforcement of existing laws.

'A Man's a Man for A' That'

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

There is a beguiling logic to the Vancouver Island John Howard society's appeal for support.

The more the society can do for a prisoner (or ex-prisoner) the less chance he will have of getting into further trouble with the law.

The less trouble he gets into with the law, the more the savings to the public purse.

The reasoning hits home when statisticians tell us it costs about $10,000 a year — $27 a day — to keep a man in jail.

Helping men and women get out of jail and back into the community is the business of this social work oriented society.

The members — there are about 100 in the Victoria area — are carrying out a tradition that began 200 years ago when a greengrocer turned philanthropist began an inspection of the English penal system and found it wanting.

It's a group that recognizes both strengths and weaknesses in the human fabric and whose simple, humble observation is, Like Burns, "a man's a man for a' that."

Largely volunteer, the organization is an independent body whose effectiveness is built around a small core of professional and clerical staff who operate out of six ground-floor offices at the Spencer House, 1951 Cook Street.

They offer a range of services from visiting inmates in institutions to supervising parolees, from helping families adjust to the temporary loss of the breadwinner to becoming an information centre for released prisoners.

The local society displays a brand of innovativeness as well.

Their booklet. How to Score on the Street, written by two ex-convicts last year on a LIP grant spells out how to travel the straight road to success. It has won national and international acclaim.

Caseworker Dolores Gala and executive secretary June Young

And the Indian Court Worker program introduced under the umbrella of the society three years ago has received widespread plaudits. Financed by the first Citizen Fund, it has proved so succesful the government is intending to start the scheme on a provincial basis January 1.

Says Margaret Heseltine, chairman of the Victoria council: "Jail is just a beginning. We try to set up a one-to-one relationship with the inmate as soon as possible."

Normally a rapport is readily achieved. Vancouver Island president Ben Van Dyk, an assistant industrial relations supervisor with B.C. Forest Products notes: "There's not the stigma of officialdom attached to our group."

The original John Howard had a fortune to finance his studies; the Vancouver Island Society that bears his name had about $60,000 last year with which to support its operations in Victoria, Nanaimo and Campbell River.

Victoria received about two-thirds of the total — mainly from provincial and federal government subsidies.

The United Way used to be the major source of funds.

Even as recently as 1972 it provided more than 50 per cent of the revenue.

However, in 1973 the allocation dipped drastically to 10 per cent.

The reason? Van Dyk can only speculate but points out the United Way's campaign last year fell considerably short of expectation.

The society was originally set to receive $1,700 a month throughout the year. But the well ran dry after only three months.

September's ledger was showing $4,000 in the red, he says, when Human resources Minister Norman Levi advised the government would increase its 1973 grants from $23,000 to $46,000.

"It was like manna from heaven," says executive secretary and administrator June Young.

Whether that recognition — and accompanying largess — will continue is another thing. Levi hasn't committed himself beyond this year.

Though the government has breathed new life into the organization — and saved it from a demise after 38 years existence in Victoria — some programs had to be cancelled through lack of funds.

Public education was one. A critical loss, say John Howard members.

Brochures couldn't be reprinted this year either. And the implementation of new LIP programs such as inmate hobbycrafts and upholstery, could not be carried out after the federal grants expired.

The problem, and the danger, is the society is becoming increasingly dependent upon the two major governments for support, says Van Dyk, when the real responsibility rests with the community.

"We are a community organization and our whole focus is on the community," says Miss Heseltine.

"Let's take an example. The man living next door to you may be an ex-convict.

"The better we can prepare him for the community obviously the better it will be for you.

"That's the whole secret to our work. We want to help him so he will never go back to jail."

"And," adds Dolores Gala, one of the two caseworkers working out of the Victoria office, "at $10,000 a year, that's quite a savings.

DANGEROUS TOY LIST CONTAINS 800 ITEMS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government has a new list of banned toys for shoppers to avoid during the holiday buying season, and it's more than half again as long as last year's.

With the pre-Christmas buying surge already in swing, the consumer product safety commission has compiled a list of over 1,500 banned products. Last year some 800-plus items were listed.

The items, although banned from sale, sometimes appear on store shelves anyway. They range from pumpkin and cat-shaped halloween candy containers with dangerous nails to toy stuffed bears with sharp, barbed eyes. There are also toy poodles with sharp wires in the tail and child-sized xylophones with sharp edges.

Eighty per cent of the nation's toy sales take place in October, November and December, the commission said. The list is available at the commission's regional offices and Washington headquarters, at no cost.

The commission tests toys for three things — sharp points, sharp edges and small parts. One or a combination of those hazards, when exposed by tests, can result in the toy being banned.

Eyes are pulled from stuffed animals; toys are subjected to impact tests; dolls are ripped apart to expose nails and pins. Some of the more recent additions to the list are imported dolls and more plastic balls on strings which "clack" when hit together.

Many of the hazards are repeat problems appearing under different brands and styles. The list is heavy on imports.

Asked why the list had grown so much during the past year, Al Castle of the commission's bureau of engineering science credited increased emphasis from the agency, which took over responsibility for product safety last May.

Castle said the testing program has better facilities and inspectors.

Arson Suggested In 5-Death Fire

VANCOUVER (CP) — Investigators are certain a fire early Sunday which took five lives was deliberately set.

Chief Fire Warden George Birnie said Monday their finding was based on examination of the fourth-floor washroom of the Commercial Hotel where the early-morning blaze originated.

Mr. Birnie said there was a definite indication from the nature of the fire that an inflammable liquid was used to start it.

There were no suspects, he said.

Walter Wolanek, 40, was identified Monday as one of the five men killed in the fire. He was a part-time waiter in the hotel's beer parlor.

Names of the other victims were not released.

The fire flared out from the washroom on the top floor of the old brick hotel on the edge of the city's Gastown district.

Some of the top-floor residents got out safely before flames raced along the main hallway and cut off the stairs and fire escape. Three of the men killed were found on the fourth floor. The two others fell from their windows.

Warden Birnie said the hotel's fire protection facilities were adequate under present city bylaws.

"The fire escape was in proper condition. There were fire extinguishers in all the halls. Recently, the internal alarm system was updated and fire doors installed on stairways between floors."

But new regulations coming into effect in 1975 will require higher standards, he said, such as additional fire-proofing of the building or a sprinkler system.

The Commercial Hotel did not have a sprinkler system.

Hotel operator Al Chubb said the hotel hadn't been planning to do anything about installing sprinklers "because we'd only just been advised and hadn't had that much time to think about it."

The Commercial was one of five hotels in the Gastown area recently cited by police for liquor violations and fights.

The Gastown area, near the city's waterfront and adjacent to the main downtown area, was renovated during the 1960s and is a mecca for transient youth and tourists.

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 600 horses were abandoned to die in northern British Columbia and the Yukon last year, says a brief by the Canadian Wild Horse Society.

The brief states that horses are turned loose to fend for themselves by hunting guides, town people, Indians, dude ranchers, local ranchers, hunters and trappers.

The brief also calls for a commission to investigate the problem and issue licences for the commercial use of horses.

A RECORD $95M FISH HAUL

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia commercial fishermen landed a record $95 million worth of fish in the first nine months of this year, $19.9 million more than for all of 1972, it was reported Monday.

The landed value of fish in 1972 was a record $75.1 million.

September salmon landings of 36.5 million pounds, worth $15.1 million, were 20 million pounds and $9.7 million greater than those for the same month a year ago.

Compared with September, 1972, pink salmon landings increased 10.2 million pounds and $2.9 million; chum salmon landings showed a gain of 7.7 million pounds and $3.7 million; while coho were up 1.7 million pounds and $1.9 million.

As a Monday, B.C. fishermen landed 137 million pounds of salmon worth a record $69 million, a gain of 12.5 million pounds and $27.6 million over landings in the same period last year.

Halibut landings in September continued to decline, with a total landing of 699,000 pounds, worth $537,000, down 1.6 million pounds and $1.1 million from September, 1972.

Tuna landings also dropped sharply, with a 1973 total to date of 2.4 million pounds valued at $983,000, compared with 7.2 million pounds a year ago valued at $2.3 million.

The latest canned salmon pack bulletin, up to Oct. 13, showed a total pack of 1,404,541 48-pound cases, the highest total since 1968 for the same period.

Ecology Damage Backed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A study done for B.C. Hydro on the proposed Seven-Mile Generating Project in the West Kootenays says the environmental effects of the project are not serious enough to question the feasibility of the project.

Major irretrievable loss from the project will be the free-flowing Pend d'Orielle River, which is valued as a scenic recreational area, says the study.

Hydro proposes to build a 200-foot dam at Seven-Mile to generate 750 Megawatts of power.

The river rises in the United States, enters B.C. about 25 miles southeast of Trail and flows into the Columbia.

The report concludes the recreation loss from construction of the project would be worth between $170,000 and $450,000.

Consultants also note that about 20 per cent of the 1,700 deer using the area for winter range will be lost and recommend that any access road for construction be located on the south side of the valley, that safe crossings be provided across the road and that remaining deer range be improved.

Priority Switch Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Electrical Contractors Association of British Columbia says electrical inspectors should turn their attention to old buildings where fire from defective wiring is a probability.

In a brief presented Monday to the commission of enquiry into electrical inspection the contractors said inspectors should pay less attention to new structures in which fires seldom happen.

The contractors said before public funds are spent on further recruitment of electrical inspectors, a reassessment should be made of what they are doing.

The commission was told electrical inspectors are ignoring the most important problems and are often making ill-founded judgments.

The contractors said an inspector should not reject electrical work because of its appearance and should approve safe wiring no matter how it looks.

They urged that public safety require that inspection be directed to older structures because the degeneration of electrical wiring makes the building less safe each year.

Yeah, But What About Leg Men?

LONDON — A British MP protested Monday that girls are having their breasts made bigger at the expense of National Health. Marcus Fox, a Conservative, said some girls were having the $340 operation free even though they expected to pay it.

He said he was all for girls having the operation, pioneered in the U.S. and known as "implantable breast prostheses," because it was effective in making girls more attractive.

SAN FRANCISCO—A prostitutes' union picketed the Hyatt Regency Hotel Monday because it allegedly furnished free rooms to vice police to trap ladies of the night.

Margo St. James, a former prostitute who founded the Union Called Coyote, said there would be more picketing at other hotels who co-operate with police.

DELAWARE, Ohio—Robert Dixon, assistant director of the Perskins Observatory, said there could be life elsewhere in the universe. He said scientists today can make amino acids and with an electrical charge create life in laboratories. The same elements on earth are found in many places in the universe.

Dixon is working on a project to adapt receiving equipment at the observatory to pick up possible radio signals from other intelligent civilizations.

SAN FRANCISCO—A leaky roof that drenched the stage of a North Beach night club with rain didn't stop the performance. Topless dancers carried on under see-through vinyl umbrellas.

ALBANY, Calif.—Mr. Charlie a 135-pound silver poodle who wears prescription glasses, is missing.

Mr. Charlie's master, dog groomer Harold Nash, said a neighbor saw a car pull up in front of his shop about the time the dog disappeared. Nash said he called police and was told to "call back tomorrow."

HAMBURG, West Germany — Actress Elizabeth Taylor has flown here to begin work on her latest movie, Identikit. She was put up in the presidential suite of a luxury hotel.

Travelling with Miss Taylor were a Siamese cat, two Yorkshire terriers and a Dutch friend. The friend is reported to be Henry Wynberg, a 39-year-old businessman seen in Rome in the company of Miss Taylor since she separated from Richard Burton.

LATROBE, Pa. — The Pennsylvania transportation department has told Oran Eberhart, 6, to be sure to include his correct operator's licence number when he files a required report on a bicycle accident.

Last July Oran borrowed a bicycle from his girlfriend, Michelle Taylor, 5, and bumped into her with it on a city street. The girl suffered a bruised knee. Oran's father, Paul, said the local hospital required Oran to file an accident report with the Latrobe police, as required by law, before treating Michelle.

ESBON, Kan.—Hot air balloonist Malcolm Forbes stayed in the air 13 hours five minutes Monday, beating by almost two hours a world record for balloon flight in a 24-hour period.

Forbes landed his balloon undamaged in a farm field about five miles west of Esbon after being blown off course by northerly winds. He had lifted off from North Platte, Neb., at 4:30 a.m. Monday and was scheduled to land near Grand Island, Neb.

SOUTH DENNIS, N.J.—Glenn Avery was so angry when he heard President Nixon had fired special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox that he climbed to the bell tower of his house here and started fasting.

"I'm going to try to stay until impeachment proceedings begin," Avery shouted from his open-air perch.

Architect Snaps UFO

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — A Lima architect said Monday he stood 50 yards from a flying saucer "shaped like an overturned soup plate," photographed the object and offered his pictures as proof.

Hugo Luyo also offered the word of a client he had taken to the Lima countryside in search of a home site. He said they drove about 54 miles inland along the Rimac River and stopped near a valley surrounded by tall hills.

In the midst of their survey, he said, "my client, obviously excited, told me he saw a shining object in the bottom of the valley that was advancing towards us extremely slowly.

"The car was not far away. I ran back for my camera, because in that fraction of a second I thought I, too, had seen something interesting." They observed an object for about 30 seconds.

Luyo said it "was the color of burnished silver. It was shaped like an overturned soup plate with a cupola on the top.

"At the very top of the cupola, there was a round object giving off a fixed sky-blue light. Lower on the cupola, we could see a row of small windows like port holes in a ship."

On the bottom of the object, he said, was what appeared to be "the propulsive force of the object . . . a dark red throbbing light that was aimed toward the ground from a sort of turbine in the middle of the upside-down plate. Near the turbine-like part, we could see protuberances like half-eggs."

Planning a New Garden
A Real Family Scheme

Renewing an old garden or remaking a new one which you have recently acquired will each have a few similar aspects to consider. The first thing is to assess what already are the most permanent features of the garden, then to figure with the family how these features will fit the uses you have for the garden.

It's not quite good enough to say that family member C has no interest at all in gardening and just leave that person out of the discussion. When confronted with a large-scale rough plan of the back part of the property, and asked an opinion on two existing trees and a piece of rough concrete slab, member C may surprise you with some imaginative ideas of utilizing these features which may seem to you to be objectionable as they are at present.

Member C may feel like showing off the fact that he can pour a smooth concrete mix over the rough stuff. And someone else may volunteer the construction of a permanent table and a bench around the bases of the old trees.

Talk this out so that the job can be started this fall. Chances are better for having something completed by spring. From experience I would say that projects left entirely until spring for a beginning are more likely to run into competition from other, more exotic, projects.

You will carefully note where trees and shrubs are already growing. You will know whether they are likely to fulfill your requirements as sound and sight barriers in future years. If not, you decide to put in either a more solid group of evergreens or a broadheaded tree or two.

Before you complete an initial planting plan, check your suggestions for two points often overlooked by home gardeners.

One point is to keep some open sky overhead somewhere in the garden. You may not realize it, but whether you are a confirmed city dweller or a would-be rural recluse, you gain something in tranquility by having a piece of open sky where you see unobstructed clouds, stars, and the sun or moon sailing free of branches.

Point two is similar in some respects. You really don't want to restrict the view to your own little world, do you? The boundary planting of your garden plot gradually closes up tightly enough to exclude everything beyond your property; then you may find yourself growing more and more insular.

Select one or two features beyond your limits which are worth including in your overall plan.

Granted that you have no control over their permanence, but time may provide another feature beyond your boundaries to add dimension to your property.

In other words don't let your horizons be limited. Link your garden to the world around you. After all, you are part of the world, not a whole world in yourself.

Fall is planning and planting time. In this coastal area color is to be had in all seasons and in all weathers. We can grow more kinds of plants here than in any other single spot in Canada. Not a boast, but a fact to take advantage of when renewing or remaking a garden.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Any bridge player can fulfill a small slam contract when he has 12 top tricks, or when the opponents blunder and hand him the slam on a silver platter. The consistent winner, however, is the player who habitually gathers in the tenuous slam contracts by availing himself of all possibilities.

Today's deal serves as an illustration of a declarer who overlooked nothing in his play of the hand. Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

After winning the opening heart lead with his ace, declarer cashed dummy's ace and king of trumps. As he examined his assets, it appeared as though the success of his contract depended on which way to play the club suit. That is, when he led a club off dummy and East followed with a low club, should South put up his jack, hoping that West rad the queen; or, instead, should he play his king, hoping that East possessed the ace?

Of course, as South analyzed this possible set-up, there was the most disturbing thought that whichever guess South took, it might well be in vain, for West might be the possessor of both the ace and queen of clubs.

After drawing trumps, South led the diamond deuce to dummy's singleton king, after which he cashed the king of hearts. A heart was next ruffed in the closed hand. Now came the ace of diamonds, on which dummy's three of clubs was discarded. On this trick East followed suit with the diamond jack.

A third diamond lead was then made, the trick being ruffed in dummy, as East dropped the diamond queen. South's diamond ten had just become the highest-ranking diamond left in the deck.

The board's remaining heart was next ruffed by South, after which the ten of diamonds was cashed. On this trick a club was discarded from dummy, leaving the board with just one remaining club. Declarer then gave up the king of clubs to West's ace. West's return of a club was ruffed in dummy. The rest of the tricks belonged to declarer.

There is no question but the declarer was very lucky in finding East with, specifically, the tripleton Q-J-x of diamonds. But it cost him absolutely nothing to have tested this possibility — it was on the house.

Each distinct letter in this addition stands for a particular but different digit.

Start with the letter O. You may see three possible values for it, but it should not be too difficult to reject two of them. Then it all adds up to that LOOK. What must it be?

Trustee, Alderman, He Wants to Be Both

Victoria school trustee Harry Graham must figure there's safety in numbers — not only is he seeking re-election to the board next month but is also running for alderman in Oak Bay.

Graham is a semi-retired engineer who lives at 633 Radcliffe Lane.

Both the school board and Oak Bay council hold a regular meeting at 8 p.m. the third Monday of each month.

However, Graham said if he is elected he could cope with both positions.

"I don't see why not," he said. "there have been aldermen in other areas that have served both.

"Maybe there would have to be some adjustment in times," Graham said, to avoid the clash between the two meetings.

Graham ran unsuccessfully for Oak Bay council last year, coming in sixth.

Five people are seeking the three seats on Saanich school board.

The latest is Charles Desmond Doyle, 45, of 759 Helvetia, an English teacher at the University of Victoria.

Doyle said, "I feel that more could be done for individual cases, both the bright child and the slow-learning child. There should be a system—a pool of visiting specialists."

He says he believes in progressive education but that "children should not be free to do anything they want in the name of self-expression. Discipline is needed in order that children can make the best use of their freedom."

A teacher for 17 years, Doyle was a collaborator on a booklet on education policy in his native New Zealand prior to coming to Victoria in 1968.

Others running for school trustee are former Central Saanich alderman Ted Clayards and the three incumbents, chairman Rubymay Parrott, Ann Foerster and Jack Armstrong.

Boon said today he is basically against the extension of Greater Victoria water system.

"My final position," he said, "will depend on what stand senior governments take on the subsidizing of the cost of this line, presently considered to be in the order of $6 million or $7 million."

Conrad Lundgren, 30, of 635 Admirals Road, has announced he will seek a seat on Esquimalt council for a second time.

He came last in a five-man contest in 1972.

Lundgren says a more conservative viewpoint is needed to keep Esquimalt "a predominantly family-home area."

Lundgren says changing the municipality to high density will result in higher taxes to meet increased costs of servicing new residents.

A father of three, Lundgren is employed by the department of national defence.

The only candidate for Colwood director on the Capital Regional Board is Dick Emery. He has served on the board for five years and filed papers for the Nov. 17 election this week.

Medical Centre Set Up

A crown corporation co-ordinate medical training and sophisticated care facilities concentrated in the Greater Vancouver area was introduced Monday in the legislature.

The legislation sets up the Medical Centre of B.C., which will consist of a group of five medical facilities, administered by a joint body of government representatives and hospital nominees.

The medical facilities in the centre will be Vancouver General Hospital, the University of B.C.'s Health Sciences Centre, Children's Hospital, the G. F. Strong Rehabilitation Centre and the B.C. Cancer Foundation.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said it is anticipated $130 million worth of facilities will be established as part of the medical centre, which may be concentrated at Shaughnessey Hospital.

Cocke also said the centre "might very well take in" St. Paul's Hospital.

The minister described the legislation as enabling the government for the first time to co-ordinate health services with education.

'No Sewers' Heights Says

DUNCAN — Ratepayers in the Eagle Heights area south of Duncan have rejected a $494,000 sewer referendum.

The vote was more than two-to-one against a money bylaw to authorize the project.

Returning officer Peter Hayward said of the 125 residents who voted, 39 ballots were in favor and 80 opposed.

Only 50 per cent of the area's eligible voters turned out.

This is the second time in less than two years Eagle Heights residents have voted on the sewer issue. In June, 1972, they rejected an amalgamation bid by the city on the basis that Duncan would install a sewer system if Eagle Heights joined the city.

Promotion For Judge

VANCOUVER (CP) — William A. Craig, Q.C., a Vancouver lawyer, will be sworn in as a new British Columbia Supreme Court justice Nov. 1.

Craig, a partner in the firm of Boughton, Street, Collins, Dunfee, Craig and Mortimer, will replace Mr. Justice W. R. McIntyre, who has been elevated to the Court of Appeals.

His appointment by Chief Justice J. O. Wilson continues the present number of 19 supreme court judges serving under the chief justice.

The 51-year-old Craig was born in Vancouver and served in the RCAF as a pilot in the Second World War. He received his law degree from the University of B.C. in 1951 and became a Queen's Counsel in 1967.

Guerrillas Nab Swissair Man

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Armed men in at least two cars kidnapped the manager of Swissair in Latin America Monday as he left his suburban home for work, the airline said.

A wave of kidnappings of wealthy persons in Argentina this year has been carried out by leftist groups demanding large ransoms for their hostages' safe return. Swissair said there was no communication from the unidentified group that kidnapped Kurt Schmid, 43.

'UTTER SPIFFLE'

KAMPALA (UPI) — Idi Amin today ordered all American or British nationals in Uganda without identification cards arrested and kept in military custody.

Th order came after a military spokesman reported a combined force of American, British and Israeli commandoes were planning to invade Uganda "any time from now."

Edmonton Court System 'Mess'

EDMONTON (CP) — A provincial judge said Monday that Edmonton's provincial judge's court is "a mess, a disgrace and most inadequate."

Judge John Coughlan made the comments at the opening of a week-long board hearing on the administration of justice in Alberta's lower courts.

He urged the three-member board, headed by Mr. Justice W. J. C. Kirby of the Alberta Supreme Court and including Dr. Max Wyman, University of Alberta president, and Ted Bower, editor of the Red Deer Advocate, to tour the municipal courthouse "to see what we are required to put up with."

Judge Coughlan said docket court, where accused make their first appearances and trial dates are set, is usually filled to capacity and the lawyers' bench in front of the courtroom is overflowing, forcing lawyers to "lounge against the walls in a most undignified manner."

"The noise is tremendous," he added.

There was an overabundance of police on all floors of the courthouse because they occupy many sections of the building.

Judge Coughlan said provincially-appointed peace officers should take the place of policemen who act as court orderlies. "Police should be in court only as witnesses."

Because of lack of courtrooms many trials are scheduled for each one and often cases must be adjourned and all the witnesses sent home. Probation officers have no place to work and must function in public corridors, he said.

CALGARY (CP) — Further allegations of brutality by guards at the Calgary Correctional Institute were heard Monday at the Harradence Commission for inquiry into brutality by guards at the prison.

Prisoner John Harwig testified he was attacked in his cell by guard John Schlegel following a disturbance by prisoners in segregation cells June 24. Schlegel and guard Norman George entered his cell and Schlegel then attacked him.

"I looked up and Schlegel was on top of me. He was twisting my arm and squeezing my neck."

William Kemp, a prisoner in the segregation cells where Harwig and Rocheleau were moved, said he saw the two being put in their cells.

He said he swore at a guard who told him to keep quiet. The guard entered his cell and started to slap him with his open hand.

He then was sprayed in the face and briefly blinded by a substance he thought was mace, he said. The substance produced a burning sensation in his nose and throat and gave off a smell like ether.

EDMONTON (CP) — Provisions to have down payments on construction of homes held in trust until the home is built were introduced in the legislature Monday.

Bob Dowling, minister of consumer affairs, said that once the legislation is passed the government will be ready to set conditions for licences and trust funds for house-building contractors.

The move is designed to curtail abuses that appeared in the industry last year when a number of persons lost their down payments after the companies they were dealing with went bankrupt, the minister said.

EDMONTON (CP) — A private member's bill to extend the privilege of parliamentary immunity to municipal aldermen was introduced Monday in the legislature.

Members of the House of Commons and provincial legislatures enjoy a traditional immunity from libel action for anything they may say within the legislatve chambers during the sessions.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Liquor Control Commission plans to write provincial brewers asking for their financial statements for the last year and information justifying price increases.

Five Manitoba brewers have asked for a meeting with the commission to deal with the matter of price increases. Commission chairman Frank Syms said Monday formal negotiations could start within a month, and likely will take a month to complete.

$1.5M Bus Purchase

WINNIPEG (CP) — The city's civic works and operations committee has recommended purchase of 30 transit buses from Flyer Industries Ltd. at a total cost of almost $1.5 million.

Casals' Death Mourned

World-Famous Cellist Used His Powers As Director, Composer To Fight for Peace Against Tyranny

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — Pablo Casals, the most famous cellist of his time, lay in state at his hilltop home today before burial in his adopted Puerto Rico as a last rebuke to the nationalist government of his native Spain.

Casals, 96, died Monday of heart and lung complications.

The famed cellist-composer-conductor vowed in 1939 never to return to Spain so long as it was ruled by Gen. Francisco Franco. He kept the self-imposed exile pledge the last 34 years of his life, and, in keeping with his wishes, it will be respected in death.

The body was to be taken from his home later today to be placed under the rotunda of the Puerto Rican capital building so the public may pay tribute.

Christian burial at the Puerto Rican memorial cemetery in Isla Verde was to be preceded by an afternoon mass officicated by Cardinal Luis Aponte Martinez at La Piedad Catholic church. Plans called for Casals' Song of the Birds to be played at the mass as the maestro requested.

The Catalonian maestro moved to Puerto Rico, homeland of his mother, in 1957 with his Puerto Rican wife, Marta Montanez. He became a beloved institution, founding the Puerto Rico Conservatory of Music, the Puerto Rican Symphony Orchestra and the Annual Casals Festival.

Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon proclaimed three days of official mourning for Casals, and ordered U.S. and Puerto Rican flags flown at half-staff throughout Puerto Rico.

Casals, who for the last 35 years used his musical talents in a protest against tyranny and a campaign for peace, died after three weeks in Auxilio Jutuo Hospital. He was taken to hospital after a heart siezure, but doctors said he also suffered from chronic bronchitis, a kidney failure and circulatory ailments.

He was the foremost cellist of the 20th century and a superlative performer into his 80s. In recent years he won new honors as a conductor.

"Sometimes I feel like a boy," Casals once said. "Music does that. I can never play the same piece twice in the same way. Each time it is new."

With characteristic Latin fervor, Herandez Colon said in his Monday proclamation:

"A giant has died. A giant in music, giant in liberty, a giant in peace. He died in Puerto Rico, land of his mother who inspired his art, land of liberty, land of peace."

At Monday night's wake, Marta's brothers carried the gold casket into the living room of the maestro's suburban home. Marta Montanez de Casals, 36, stood at the position of honor, in a long-sleeved black dress, holding the Catalonian red and yellow multi-striped flag in one hand and the lone star Puerto Rican tricolor in the other. She blinked back tears.

The closed casket was placed between two gigantic red floor candles.

Environment Education Urged

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government should immediately begin environmental education programs in schools, says a report released today.

The report, by a committee composed of officials from the environment and education departments, says Saskatchewan still has the chance to focus attention on protection of the environment, rather than having to restore environmental quality.

Environment Minister Neil Byers and Education Minister Gordon MacMurchy said details of proposed government action on the report will be announced shortly.

The report calls for "immediate incorporation of environment education content" in science and social studies courses in elementary and secondary schools and over the longer term incorporation in all subject areas.

It also recommends creation of an outdoor environmental education standards committee and expansion of outdoor environmental education facilities, including winterization to allow for year-round use.

CROCUS ART FOR ANNE

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba branch of the Monarchist League of Canada has sent an oil painting of the Manitoba crocus to Princess Anne for a wedding gift.

The painting, by Winnipeg artist Florence Musick, was sent to the princess Monday. She is to be married Nov. 14.

116 Arson Incidents Suspected in Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — Arson or suspected arsson was reported in 116 fires in the first nine months of 1973, more than three times as many as in 1972, the city fire department says in its monthly report for September.

Officials attribute the increase — there were 38 cases of arson or suspected arson in the same period last year — to revised reporting methods.

The report says arson was suspected or proven in 20 fires during September compared with two in September last year.

ROYAL CERTIFIED SERVICE ELIMINATES SEPARATE SERVICE CHARGES.

It also includes several other conveniences and cash-saving benefits—even a special reduction on the regular interest rate for your Termplan Personal Loan. It also provides you with a special personal identification card, which will entitle you to special treatment in a number of important ways at any branch of the Royal Bank, anywhere in Canada.

If you apply NOW—ahead of the rush—you will receive your Royal Certified Service card in plenty of time to allow you to start enjoying all of the benefits of the plan, starting on January 15th. (You may even have two cards: one for yourself and one for your spouse.)

We recommend that you carry the card at all times, since many of the special benefits to which you will become entitled will require that you show your card. Your card will prove that you are personally entitled to several special advantages that we will not be extending to other Royal Bank customers.

UNLIMITED CHEQUING
As a Royal Certified Service customer, you can write as many PCA cheques as you wish, without paying the normal 14 cents-per-cheque service charge. If you pay a lot of your bills by cheque, you'll find that these cash savings alone are quite valuable to you.

OVERDRAFT PROTECTION
If for any reason, you write cheques which cannot be covered by the balance in your personal chequing account, they will be honoured up to $300! No more accidental "NSF" cheques. This privilege is for Royal Certified Service cardholders only. Overdrafts will be subject to a monthly interest rate of 1½%: NO CHARGE AT ALL IF THE INTEREST IS UNDER 50¢.

REDUCED TERMPLAN PERSONAL LOAN RATE
As a Royal Certified Service customer, you will be entitled to a SPECIAL REDUCTION off the current interest rate on our Termplan Personal loans.

If you have an existing Termplan Personal loan, you are entitled to this new advantage. We will give you a cash credit, equivalent to this special reduction in interest on your outstanding balance.

When you receive your special Royal Certified Service card, just come to the Royal Bank branch where you have your Termplan loan, show your card as soon as you conveniently can after January 15th, and we'll do the rest.

Your special reduction will take effect from the date you present your Royal Certified Service card and will not be retroactive. (This is another good reason why you should apply for your Royal Certified Service membership as soon as possible.)

FOR NEW CUSTOMERS: If you are a new borrower, you will be glad to know that one of the most helpful things we do is to make it easy for you to borrow money from us. Thousands of responsible Canadians have borrowed at the Royal Bank—comfortable in the knowledge that we will never knowingly let them "get in over their heads". Many of our nicest customer relationships started with such a loan.

EXCLUSIVE PERSONALIZED PCA CHEQUES
You will be given free distinctive, fully-personalized cheques, available exclusively to Royal Certified Service members. These cheques will be personalized with your name, full address and telephone number (if you choose).

CHEQUE CASHING—COAST TO COAST
Your Royal Certified Service card (and your exclusive Royal Certified Service cheques) will make it genuinely easy for you to get quick cash—at any of the more than 1,300 Royal Bank branches throughout Canada's ten provinces.

No charge for either convenience!

Ottawa Silent On B.C. Gas

The provincial government's deadline of noon today for a response from Ottawa on B.C.'s natural gas crisis has come and gone with no indication from the federal government it will restrict exports of natural gas to the U.S.

Federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald is in Washington, D.C., and had no communication with B.C. officials other than a telegram Friday afternoon in which he accused the government and its principal energy adviser of taking opposite positions in the dispute.

The province's position is that Ottawa, through the National Energy Board, should cut the flow of B.C. natural gas to U.S. customers so that energy requirements will be met in the B.C. interior, where natural gas shortages are already being felt.

Ottawa's Macdonald responded to the B.C. minister and James Rhodes, chairman of B.C. energy Commission, were representing differing positions.

Donald Macdonald said B.C. must decide whether it wants to pay more for natural gas supplies — through more expensive Alberta sources — or seek curtailment of exports to the U.S.

The shortage of natural gas has developed because of production problems encountered by Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., the principal supplier of natural gas in the province, with the result that supplies to all customers have been cut by 10 per cent.

Alex Macdonald said when he sent his ultimatum that if there is no response from Ottawa by noon today, the provincial government will take action to secure alternative supplies of natural gas.

One source would be through an existing pipeline extension from northern Alberta to B.C. This gas would not be available before Jan. 1, 1974, however, and would be more expensive than the gas supplied to B.C. users now.

The second alternative is to have the Alberta and Southern Gas Co. supply Westcoast's U.S. customers and have Westcoast maintain its supplies to B.C. customers.

Brazilian Airliner Crashes on Take-Off

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — A Brazilian airliner with a 65-passenger capacity belly-flopped into Rio bay on take-off today.

First reports said at least 20 persons were rescued and 10 remained aboard the partially-submerged aircraft. Reports said there is a possibility the 10 are still alive.

Four other passengers are known to have been rescued.

Confusion existed because of the large number of volunteer sea craft helping in rescue operations.

Many survivors are believed to have been brought ashore and not officially reported.

The aircraft is a Samurai, a twin-engined Japanese-built turbo-jet, airport sources said.

One airport employee said: "It was tremendous luck. Hardly anyone died because the plane floated long enough for most of the passengers to escape."

Mitchell Wins Stay

NEW YORK (UPI) — The trial of John Mitchell and Maurice Stans was adjourned today until Jan. 7th because of legal problems relating to a White House tape recording.

The conspiracy and obstruction of justice trial, scheduled to begin today, was delayed by Judge Lee Gagliardi at the request of federal prosecutors.

They had asked for time after learning last Friday that President Nixon would not release a tape recording of a conversation he is said to have had with his former counsel, John W. Dean III.

Paper Mills Resume Work

MONTREAL (CP) — Four of five Canadian International Paper Co. mills have resumed full production following contract ratification votes by workers who have been on strike since August.

The return to work during the weekend of 3,800 United Paperworkers International Union members eased a newsprint supply crisis which had forced some U.S. and Canadian newspapers to cut back.

One local union at a CIP mill in Dalhousie, N.B., rejected the proposal, and 1,000 workers remain idle, along with members at five other Quebec and Ontario paper mills.

Small Grocery Future Dim

TORONTO (CP) — Chains of supermarkets and convenience stores will continue to grow in Canada and "the future for smaller independent grocer stores looks grim," the Canadian Federation of Retail Grocers was told Monday.

V. T. Robins, vice-president of A.C. Neilsen Co. of Canada Ltd., said grocery stores other than those in corporate chains sold $4.64 million worth of food this year in Canada up to Aug. 1.

But in Ontario, large independent and chain stores account for 85 per cent of total grocery sales.

Robins said in Canada independent stores that do more than $200,000 worth of business annually had 28 per cent of grocery sales while smaller stores had only nine per cent.

In 1970 there were 38,500 small grocery stores and by 1981 this will drop to 36,000, he said.

Meanwhile the number of stores in traditional chains will increase to 2,500 from 1,860 while convenience chains, such as milk stores, are expected to double to 1,530 by 1981.

He said health and beauty aids and "add-and-heat dinners" are the fastest growing categories in supermarkets.

DEAF MAN 893rd IRISH VICTIM

BELFAST (UPI) An elderly deaf man who apparently misheard the directions of those trying to guide him to safety was killed Monday night in a bomb blast that wrecked a Belfast bar, police said.

Police and army troops mounted a city-wide dragnet looking for a car seen speeding from the pub minutes after the bomb went off. A police spokesman said a resident saw the car driving away and gave a good description of it.

The old man's death brought to 893 the number of persons killed in four years of strife among majority Protestants, minority Roman Catholics and British troops in the province.

Fire-scarred North Isle makes it back to port

FIVE ESCAPE INJURY

Five commercial fishermen escaped serious injury when fire gutted the interior of a 68-foot seiner on its way out from the Inner Harbor shortly after 8 a.m. today.

Owner David Houston of Delta said the North Isle, valued at $90,000, would have been a write-off had the incident happened away from fire-fighting tugs and other equipment.

Houston was asleep in his bunk when he smelled smoke.

Rushing to the engine room, he opened a companionway door. An explosion followed.

Within minutes fire-fighting tugs were at the scene, smothering the flames that gutted the cabin and engine room as the seiner's crew took to a skiff.

Houston was unable to give an estimate of the damage to city fire officials but reported he had lost radar, depth sounder and other electronic gear.

Houston was still unsure of how the explosion was triggered.

Nixon Gives Up His Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon gave up today his fight to keep his Watergate tapes secret and agreed to turn them over to a federal judge.

The president's constitutional lawyer, Charles Alan Wright, told Judge John Sirica that the president as late as Monday had not intended to surrender his tapes but had changed his mind.

"There would have been those who would have said the president was defying the law," Wright said in Sirica's hushed courtroom. "But this president does not defy the law."

Wright told Sirica that Nixon had hoped that the proposed compromise he had announced Friday night seeking to avert a constiutional crisis over the tapes issue would have satisfied two court orders that he make the tapes available to Sirica for screening for the Watergate grand jury.

"We had hoped that this kind of solution would end the constitutional crisis," Wright said. "But events over the weekend made it very apparent that it would not."

The "events" to which Wright referred was a furor including efforts by some congressmen to start impeachment proceedings against Nixon after he fired Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor.

The House of Representatives today began preliminary inquiries into whether President Nixon should be impeached.

House Speaker Carl Albert sent the judiciary committee all impeachment resolutions. The committee's chairman, Representative Peter Rodino (Dem., N.J.) said: "Events of the past few days leave us with little choice at this time but to move ahead with preparation for impeachment proceedings."

Albert cautioned against any hasty or reckless action.

Rodino described his committee's task as being "the preliminary stage to inquire whether or not there is evidence to establish an impeachable offence."

Investigators have uncovered a new case of alleged wrong-doing involving Nixon. This time, it involves the dairy industry, and possible campaign fund pay-offs for preferntial legislation.

$180M For Land

EDMONTON (CP) — A land development program that would be attractive to municipalities and remove some of their concerns about the financing of new residential development was suggested by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford Monday.

Basford said that $180 million is available under existing legislation for land assembly and the new communities program in the next 14 months.

"If we can work together, I believe we would create substantially more publicly-developed serviced land," he told more than 200 delegates representing the federal, provincial and municipal levels of government.

$1 BILLION FUND

Earlier, the municipal delegation to the conference had urged in a brief that a $1-billion community development fund be set up by the federal government for land banking and experimental housing projects.

The municipalities said in a brief Monday that the money would be in addition to current federal spending on existing programs under the National Housing Act.

The municipal group suggested that the federal government could use the money to buy land directly for housing and community development. The land acquisition would have to fit in with provincially-approved municipal plans.

GUIDELINES

Basford proposed that land assembly funds would be applied on a priority basis to public projects adhering to the following guidelines:

—When land is sold or leased, the participating governments would put the profits back into the project—at no cost to the municipality—in land for open space, community facilities and school sites. Any remaining profit would be applied to the capital cost of community service buildings.

—A portion of the land would be made available free of charge for public housing.

—Prices for the sale or leasing of land for modest-income housing would be at, or close to, cost. Prices for more expensive units would be close to market rates.

—Provinces and municipalities would be allowed to defer interest on federal land assembly loans until the land is marketed.

Basford emphasized that the program could be achieved within existing legislation.

"If we are going to be in the land development business, we should be setting the example for the private sector, not simply imitating their methods," Basford said. Hopefully, we will break the financial bottleneck that has restrainced municipalities from opening up land and establish a style and method of development to which all private developers in the country would be obliged to conform."

He urged delegates to have the appropriate officials at each level of government ex-

LE DUC THO, a member of the North Vietnamese politburo, today rejected the Nobel Peace Prize awarded to him jointly with U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger, a Hanoi broadcast said.

In his message to the Nobel committee Tho said: "I feel it impossible to accept the 1973 Nobel Peace Prize" because the United States and the South Vietnamese regime have continued to commit "very serious violations" of the ceasefire agreement and "peace has not been really restored in South Vietnam."

BCR Men Defiant

The leader of striking shopcraft unions at B.C. Rail said today the men won't go back to work in response to a call from Premier Barrett, who is also president of B.C. Rail.

Barrett sent a telegram Monday afternoon asking the men to return by 1 p.m. today, saying "the economic situation in B.C. compels me to make this request of you today." He didn't say what will happen if there was no return to work by 1 p.m.

Asked by reporters this morning if the government planned to introduce back to work legislation today, he said only "no comment."

Norman Farley, chairman of the four-union negotiating committee of 383 men who repair railway equipment, said, "they are not even sure what is the situation created by the strike."

He said B.C. Rail was shut down by a strike in 1966 for three weeks while the present strike has lasted only nine days.

"I haven't found that the public is beefing. They are not hitting the hotlines or the editorials," Farley said from Vancouver.

He said the strikers are "not asking for sympathetic handouts or charitable donations" but over the years the employees had "fallen behind" in wages and it was time to catch up.

He said no negotiations have been arranged and the four striking unions were meeting with top officers of the B.C. Federation of Labor to "map strategy."

Barrett, in his telegram, said "there is no doubt in my mind that your economic situation has been neglected for many years past, however, no new government can make up overnight for many years of neglect."

Mideast Battles Raging Again

Times News Services

Fierce tank and artillery clashes exploded along the Suez Canal today and dog-fights erupted over the Syrian battleground.

The war raged into its 18th day on both fronts after an only partial overnight pause for the precarious Security Council truce designed to halt the combat in place and open the way to negotiations for a permanent peace.

Israeli's renewed its offensive in Egypt sent spearheads to within 37 miles of Cairo but the Egyptians said only that heavy fighting had broken out and that Israel started it.

Egypt called for an emergency Security Council meeting to discuss what it said were Israeli violations of the fragile ceasefire. Council president Sir Laurence McIntyre of Australia called a midday session at UN headquarters in New York.

Egypt and Israel had accepted the truce appeal worked out by the United States and the Soviet Union and both ordered their armies Monday evening to hold their fire unless fired on.

But Syria kept silent on the UN call, and only hours after it went into effect there were mutual accusations of ceasefire violations by Egyptians and Israelis along the Suez front.

A correspondent for Egypt's Middle East News Agency said the Israeli and Egyptian forces by today were "locked in the most vicious fighting since the outbreak of the war."

Syria charged the Israelis sent about 60 planes in "waves" to bomb civilian targets today north of Damascus and said Israeli planes and cannons hit villages in the eastern foothills of Mount Hermon.

The renewed fighting cast doubt on whether the ceasefire call can bring a quick halt to the fourth Middle East war despite the apparent agreement between U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger and Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev.

Egypt said the Israelis grabbed new positions during the night, particularly in efforts to expand the Israeli foothold on the west bank of the canal.

Meanwhile, should the fighting end, 30 Canadian soldiers are ready to go to the Middle East immediately if they are needed to bolster United Nations truce observer forces there, an armed forces spokesman said Monday in Ottawa.

At the U.N., diplomats worked today on plans for policing any ceasefire, with support growing for use of U.S. and Soviet troops.

The only hitch was China.

Diplomats report increasing backing to suggestions that Moscow and Washington send units to serve side-by-side in an unprecedented tour of duty as truce policemen.

But Chinese ambassador Huang Hua accused the "two superpowers" of seeking to perpetuate a "no peace-no war" situation in the Middle East in their joint ceasefire resolution approved Monday.

It is likely that China will veto any plan to send Soviet and U.S. troops into the Middle East, sources say.

Israel 'On Top'

Military analysts expressed the view Monday that Israeli forces hold the upper hand in the Suez Canal area and can trap or destroy a large part of the Egyptian army if the fighting continues for another week.

Officials here estimate the Israelis now hold close to 500 square miles of territory on the Egyptian side of the canal.

But more importantly, these sources said the fast-moving Israeli armored units had cut the only railroad and highway links between Ismailia and Cairo in the central canal area and the sole rail and road link between Cairo and Port Suez on the southern end of the canal.

The Israeli armored units operating on the West Bank have knocked out many of the Russian-supplied surface-to-air missile batteries, thus giving the Israeli air force a fairly clear shot at much of the Egyptian armor left on the East Bank.

Despite the fact that Egyptian forces still hold a roughly five-mile deep beachhead along much of the East Bank, many U.S. military men here feel Israel clearly has gained the edge.

"Strategically," one officer said, "Israel has it all over them."

Aside from the rail and

$1-a-Gallon Gas on Way?

Dollar-a-gallon gasoline in British Columbia is a possibility because of the rising price of world crude oil, B.C. Energy Commission chairman James Rhodes said Monday in Vancouver.

He told the annual convention of B.C. Automotive Dealers Association the price of imported crude oil has risen from between $2 and $3 to above $6 a barrel and could go to $10.

The energy commission's intention "is to assure an adequate supply of petroleum for B.C." Rhodes said, adding it would be no easy task because this province produces only 50 per cent of the petroleum it consumes and there is no evidence of any great amount of undiscovered deposits of oil.

He said the energy commission, in its detailed look at the petroleum industry ordered by the cabinet last week, will examine present and future oil demands and prices, look for measures to guarantee adequate supplies, and for other measures that will assure fair prices.

In Alberta, the government has threatened to take greater control over its shipments of oil to the rest of Canada and the world.

The action, described in the legislature as an Alberta-first policy, would be the latest move in Alberta's fight with the federal government to control its oil resources.

Bill Dickie, provincial minister of mines and minerals, said Monday the move "being looked at in the light of recent events" is an act giving the province the power to determine how much crude oil could be sold outside Alberta.

United States energy adviser John Love, appointed by President Nixon two weeks ago, is meeting Canadian Energy Minister Donald Macdonald today in Ottawa to discuss a growing list of Canada-United States energy problems.

It is the first meeting between the two men and their talks will cover a variety of thorny issues precipitated by changing Canadian energy policies.

The list includes:

—The 40 cents-a-barrel crude oil export tax that annoyed U.S. officials when announced last month without advance consultation.

—Possible cutback in Canadian natural gas exports to protect B.C. consumers from winter shortages.

—Ottawa's proposed extension of the interprovincial pipeline to Montreal. This would reduce Quebec and Atlantic reliance on imported oil from Venezuela and the Middle East and could lead to cutbacks in Canadian oil exports to the U.S.

LIQUOR STORE HOURS CUT

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP) — The Liquor Control Board of Ontario has announced this community's liquor store will not open Saturdays, following complaints by priests of weekend drunkenness.

MLA BROUSSON QUITS

Brousson, first elected in a 1968 byelection, rose in his place as the house was about to adjourn at 6 p.m. Monday and told his colleagues he is no longer able to continue as both an MLA and a businessman and was therefore resigning.

Premier Barrett said Brousson's decision is "regrettable" but said the new system of governing has caught up with B.C.

Brousson's departure leaves the Liberal party with only four members in the legislature. The NDP government has 38, Social Credit 10 and the Progressive Conservatives 2.

Brousson, whose heating and refrigeration wholesale and distributing business was recently acquired by a larger firm, said he has been finding his business duties and oppor-

Profit Goes 'Missing'

TORONTO (CP) — A survey of five major food chains here has indicated the retail price of beef has dropped only 10 per cent since late August while the wholesale price has decreased about 17 per cent in the same period.

Federal department of agriculture figures show Toronto supermarket chains saw their cost of beef carcasses drop to $82.65 a hundredweigrt last week from 1.00.22 Aug. 29.

However, the survey noted the retail weighted average cost of a beef cut dropped only to $1.36 from $1.46 a pound in the same period.

And the Canadian Cattlemen's Association is concerned about the discrepancy.

Charles Gracey, association president, said retail prices were resulting in lower consumption as the number of animals on farms increases.

Supermarket spokesmen say most of the extra margin since August has gone toward restoring profits lost when wholesale beef prices hit record highs last summer.

IN THE HOUSE

The government continues to resist changes in the religious objector clause in new labor legislaton and subsequent voting on amendments had the two Conservative members splitting their vote. See Page 14.

Import Duties On Oil Dropped

OTTAWA (CP) — All import duties on gasoline, light heating oils, diesel fuel, aviation fuel and feedstocks for petrochemical industries will be abolished Wednesday, Finance Minister John Turner announced today in the Commons.

"This action is being taken to offset rising prices for petroleum products," the minister said in tabling the ways and means motion that accompanies any tax change.

DST... Energy Saver for B.C.?

Year-round daylight saving time, a fuel-saver during the First and Second World Wars, may offer some relief for B.C. in the face of possible energy shortages.

"That's a very interesting idea," Premier Barrett said Monday, when asked his opinion of the suggestion. He said he would take it up with Resources Minister Bob Williams.

The logic behind permanent summer time is simple: longer hours of daylight would cut the use of electrical energy needed for lighting homes, offices and streets.

Clocks are usually turned ahead in the spring and back again in the fall by cabinet order-in-council. DST is scheduled to end next Sunday.

Opposition members expressed interest in the idea Monday and most said it would be an easy way to conserve fuel.

Bill Bennett (SC—South Okanagan) said he didn't think the hour change would inconvenience anyone, including farmers in his own constituency.

Most farmers are working under lights early in the morning anyway, he said.

Liberal leader David Anderson said it was an excellent idea but would be most effective only if done in consultation with other jurisdictions. The peak load factor is important, he said, and the load should be staggered in relation to Seattle, for example.

The extra hour of daylight has found some support in the U.S. where the transportation department, which enforces

Pickets Protest 7% Offer

Federal clerical workers demonstrated their anger today at a 7 per cent salary increase offer over three years with informational picketing across the country.

Targets in Victoria included the federal building at Yates and Government, the Unemployment Insurance Commission on Douglas, the taxation and manpower offices on Vancouver and dockyard.

The picketing, carefully timed to coincide with lunch hours, marked the first day of arbitration hearings in Ottawa to decide a new contract for 59,000 employees in the clerical and regulatory group, including between 1,500 and 2,000 in Greater Victoria.

The clerical group was offered pay raises of 3 per cent in the first year of the contract and 2 per cent in each of the second and third.

Also in dispute, and referred to arbitration, are hours of work, overtime, vacations, shift premiums and a number of other issues.

The group voted earlier to give up the right to strike in favor of arbitration.

Tom Dalzell, regional representative for the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said today he doubted the group would vote for arbitration of the next contract dispute after the experience with the present negotiations but this would depend on the results of the arbitration.

"We're sick with the offer," he said.

The pickets handed out a one-page bulletin saying they don't seek to lead the way in pay and benefits but would like to hold their own in the face of the rapidly rising cost of living.

The bulletin described the treasury board's pay offer as "the most unkind cut of all" because Statistics Canada has reported the cost of living increased 8.3 per cent in the last 12-month period.

"Food, which amounts to a proportionately greater amount of low income budget, has increased by 16 per cent in the same period," the bulletin said.

As a result, the clerical and regulatory group was "being offered a cut in pay for each of three years."

The bulletin which said the treasury board was "quite serious" in its offer suggested there was no intention of arriving at an agreement in negotiations but simply to let the arbitrator make the decision.

Hydro Lines Up Meetings

B.C. Hydro, along with the Capital Region District will hold a public meeting in Victoria Nov. 14 to discuss alternate routes for two future transmission lines between Victoria and the Qualicum area.

Similar meetings will be held at Nanaimo Nov. 7, Parksville Nov. 8 and Duncan Nov. 22.

The first of the two 90-mile high-voltage transmission lines will be required by 1977 and the second by the early 1980s. They will form the backbone of a new Island power system to meet electricity needs for the next 25 or 30 years, Hydro said today.

The meetings will give a preliminary assessment of several alternate routes for the new lines as seen by Hydro and will open discussion between the authority and those affected by the project before final routing decisions are made.

Follow-up meetings will be held early next year after consultants have completed their studies and others interested have had a chance to study effects of alternate routes.

Mine Given Extra Time To Clean Up

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Pollution Control Board has rejected an appeal by Jordan River Mines Ltd. for eased pollution controls but has granted the company six more months to meet the original tougher regulations.

The copper mine 35 miles west of Victoria, which has been plagued with problems since it was reactivated over two years ago, must discharge its tailings 1,500 feet offshore at a minimum depth of 40 feet, as ordered earlier.

But the Oct. 15 deadline has been extended to April 30 next year, board chairman Valter Raudsepp has advised the company in a letter ruling on the mine's latest appeal.

In Vancouver today mine manager Edward Bettiol said the only problem which might arise meeting that deadline could come from rough seas when the time comes to lay the discharge pipe.

The discharge or slurry, powdered rock left after mineral extraction, is being dumped about 500 feet offshore, producing what Bettiol called turbidity or "visual pollution."

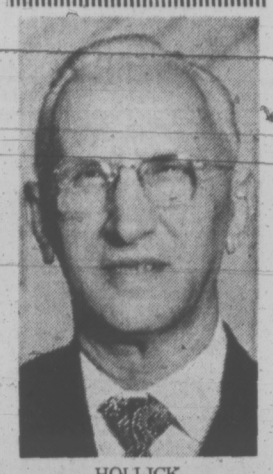
The company had been having trouble maintaining the necessary velocity in the discharge system, leading it to silt up and causing the mine to shut down and lay men off, he said.

The board, in ruling on the company appeal, ordered it to submit final plans for the required discharge system by the end of this year or shut down.

Troubles over mine effluent began even before the former Cowichan Copper Mine was reactivated. In June of 1971 William Venables, the provincial director of pollution control, rejected the mine's application for a permit to discharge up to a million gallons of slurry into Juan de Fuca Strait.

The company appealed that decision to the Pollution Control Board which ruled it could have a permit if it met tough control standards to be set by Venables, including the 1,500-foot outfall.

Last May there were complaints tailings were fouling the nearby beaches and a break in the pipe was subsequently discovered.



HOLLICK
. . . "businessmen unhappy"

Realtor In Race Against Pollen

William Hollick, a 61-year-old city businessman with no previous political experience, today announced he will oppose Mayor Peter Pollen in the Nov. 17 mayoralty race.

Hollick, principal of a real estate company, said if he is elected "we will have better public relations with builders, contractors and developers."

He said Pollen's two-year term has been marked by three lawsuits against the city over development issues, and businessmen generally "are not very happy" with the state of affairs at City Hall.

Hollick, who insisted he is a serious candidate, despite his lateness in mounting a campaign, claimed Pollen has accomplished nothing in the past two years except produce an increase in taxes.

"They are fighting among themselves. Let's face it, there is dissension down there. How are they going to accomplish anything?" he told reporters at a hastily-called press conference in his office at 1118 Quadra.

As a "full-time working mayor," Hollick said he hopes to bring unity and harmony to city council and instigate more efficient operation of all city services.

Other points in his platform:

—To keep down property taxes ("The taxpayers' principal concern is taxes.")

—Construction of a convention centre which, he claimed, can be done at no cost to taxpayers under a plan he declined to reveal.

Hollick who lives at 2545 Lansdowne, said he has been a resident of Victoria for 30 years at his business premises. The small-panelled office, decorated with driftwood and a large plastic plant, lies in the shadow of the highrise building erected by Vancouver developer G. F Mulek.

THEY DIDN'T IGNORE EXPLOSIVE ISSUE

There were 16 tons and it was too explosive a matter to be ignored by police.

The matter was settled Monday in provincial court when W.A.M. Drilling and Blasting Co. was fined $100 for illegally storing 32,000 pounds of explosives.

Operator William Alexander Morris, 32, of 2665 Sooke Road, pleaded guilty. Colwood RCMP said the explosives were found July 19 in a magazine on private property in Colwood.

At the time of the offence, Morris had a licence to store only 150 pounds.

Morris told the court he now has received a licence to store 32,000 pounds.

$50,000 Expansion Planned at Academy

An estimated $50,000 in renovations will be made at Victoria Riding Academy, manager Don Carley said today.

Carley said he has been stalling on improvements to the academy for two years as a result of Oak Bay council's indecision over what to do with the 9.38-acre site, owned by the municipality.

At a regular council meeting Monday first three readings were given a bylaw designating the land as a recreation-club zone to be used only for a riding academy.

The new bylaw, which follows council's Oct 9 decision to refuse the provincial government's offer to purchase the land for $900,000, will be discussed at a public hearing Nov. 5.

Carley said repairs to the existing buildings, which he said are worth $70,000, have been delayed because the land has been rented on a month-to-month basis.

He intends to ask for a six to 10-year lease before making any major renovations.

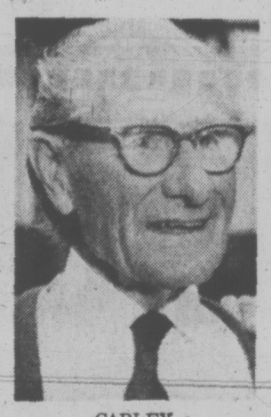
Plans include:

—an indoor riding ring occupying 1,600 square feet to replace the existing 800-square-foot ring;

—a 37,500-square-foot outdoor ring bordered by a fence 300 feet long and four feet high;

—paint existing buildings.

About 75 horses are boarded at the academy which is used by 350 people, said Carley. There are 10 employees.



CARLEY
. . wants long lease

Carley explained $50,000 is his estimate of the proposed renovation costs and the exact amount he will be able to pour into the academy will depend on the taxes.

Mayor Frances Elford said council is bound by the Municipal Act to impose taxes on land leased for commercial use.

Carley has been operating since 1969 on a month-to-month basis and has not had to pay taxes, she said.

Elford was against giving third reading to the bylaw and would liked to have seen the matter tabled to allow time to discuss it with Carley.

Free Buses Ruled Out

A system of free transit in downtown Victoria and Vancouver — similar to that being tried in Seattle — has been ruled out by the provincial Bureau of Transit.

Director Victor Parker said Monday "other systems" to encourage use of public transit are being considered.

"We are very interested in what they are doing in Seattle and we're keeping an eye on it but you can accomplish all that Seattle is doing are more simply by developing some kind of a pass system," he said.

Such a pass system, or other methods of prepaying for transit, are being considered by the provincial transit agency, he said.

Parker described Seattle's free buses, in which fares are paid when buses leave a 105-block downtown core, as "cumbrous".

Meanwhile, occupancy in transit buses in downtown Seattle has increased by 50 per cent since fares were abolished Sept. 9, according to Carle H. Salley, operations director of Metro Transit Services.

No evaluation has yet been made of the number of cars removed from the streets of the 105-block area as a result of the free bus service, Salley said. But an "intensified study" of the system and its social and environmental impact should provide that figure next July.

Students Don't Like The Name

The name Saanich community secondary school isn't going down so well with Mt. View senior secondary students.

About 80 per cent of the students don't like the name, student council president Liborio Nanni said today.

Many would prefer to leave the name of the new school at Burnside and Acorn, due to be finished in late 1974 or early 1975, as Mt. View senior secondary, he said.

The present Mt. View building at 3814 Carey is going to be transformed into Mt. View junior secondary in 1975, with an enrolment of 490.

Senior high students now going to Mt. View will become part of Saanich community school, which may spend the first few months of the 1974-75 school year in the Mt. View building before moving into the new school.

Nanni said the name Saanich community school sounds too institutional.

Mt. View students will probably petition or write to Greater Victoria school board trustees asking that the name be changed, he said.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me when and why the 49th parallel was chosen as the border between Canada and the United States?—M.D.

A. It was chosen in 1846. It was first suggested by the United States in 1818 but Britain opposed the proposal as it would deprive it of the Oregon country then in the hands of the Hudson's Bay Co. Later the U.S. claimed the Pacific Coast territory as far north as the southern boundary of Alaska at the 54th parallel and threatened to fight for the territory. The U.S. finally accepted its original proposal to extend the boundary along the 49th parallel.

Q. Could you please tell me if we have a "harvest moon" month in September or October? D.M.

A. The Weather Office advises that full moons in September and October are sometimes referred to as "harvest moons," indicating bright nights to finish off harvests. But there is no definite reference to a harvest moon month. A hunters' moon is referred to, however, on Oct. 11.

Boy Charged After Hoax Phone Call

Police said today Mrs. Margaret Haight, a clerk typist at Central junior high, received a telephone call stating "there's a bomb in the school."

Mrs. Haight contacted B.C. Telephone, who traced the call.

A number was obtained and when police investigated they found a 13-year-old boy.

He was charged under the Criminal Code with making a threatening telephone call.

TOO MANY LIONS TO SUIT THE DRAGON

There were too many lions to suit the Dart Coon Club and their dragon.

While the Victoria Chinatown's Lions Club raised $6,800 for charity Saturday from the Lantern Festival and pageant in Central Junior High, the Dart Coon Club was celebrating its 58th anniversary with a traditional dragon dance on Fisgard.

The festival drew 2,500 and there was a large turnout for the Dart Coon celebrations but there was no connection between the two events as stated in the Times Monday.

LEVI'S CAR HIT

A man was injured and $1,900 damages done when a car went out of control and collided with two parked cars in the 1300 block Rockland Monday night.

Driver of the car Richard L. Bern, 1083 Redfern was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital, treated for injuries to his left arm, wrist and right leg, and released.

One of the parked cars was a government vehicle used by Norman Levi, minister of human resources. The other belonged to a Victoria man, James F. Bussey.

Kids Intimidating Parents

A new trend in relations between parents and teen-agers is marked by intimidation, says Miss Mary Reistroffer, associate professor of social worker at the University of Wisconsin.

"Many parents are afraid and intimidated by their kids," she said in an interview here.

The tremendous number of teen-agers who run away from home is an example of such acting out, she believes. In previous generations running away from home usually was only a threat.

Teen-agers are likely to do more than threaten these days because of the growth of communications.

"The outside world is readily available. Turn on a television and there you are in Beirut. The outside isn't so frightening."

At the same time, the former "perswasive influence" of the parent has been lost.

"You can be a good and responsible and conscientious parent but you can't control the exposure your child gets outside your own front door," Miss Reistroffer says.

As a result pressure from a teen-ager's peers are often as strong and, in some cases, stronger than pressure from parents.

The new spirit is indicated in the experience of foster care agencies in North America who have noted an increase in the number of self-referrals by teen-agers who come in "to see what we have to offer" having failed to reach accord with their own parents.

Miss Reistroffer is in Victoria to lead a two-day seminar sponsored by the provincial department of human resources and the B.C. Foster Parents' Association.

Fire-scarred North Isle makes it back to port

FIVE ESCAPE INJURY

Five commercial fishermen escaped serious injury when fire gutted the interior of a 68-foot seiner on its way out from the Inner Harbor shortly after 8 a.m. today.

Owner David Houston of Delta said the North Isle, valued at $90,000, would have been a write-off had the incident happened away from fire-fighting tugs and other equipment.

Houston was asleep in his bunk when he smelled smoke.

Rushing to the engine room, he opened a companionway door. An explosion followed.

He escaped with slight burns, the flames singeing his hair and arms.

Within minutes fire-fighting tugs were at the scene, smothering the flames that gutted the cabin and engine room as the seiner's crew took to a skiff.

Houston was unable to give an estimate of the damage to city fire officials but reported he had lost radar, depth sounder and other electronic gear.

Houston was still unsure of how the explosion was triggered.

He has owned the boat jointly with B.C. Packers for two years.

Nixon Gives Up His Tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon gave up today his fight to keep his Watergate tapes secret and agreed to turn them over to a federal judge.

The president's constitutional lawyer, Charles Alan Wright, told Judge John Sirica that the president as late as Monday had not intended to surrender his tapes but had changed his mind.

"There would have been those who would have said the president was defying the law," Wright said in Sirica's hushed courtroom. "But this president does not defy the law."

Wright told Sirica that Nixon had hoped that the proposed compromise he had announced Friday night seeking to avert a constiutional crisis over the tapes issue would have satisfied two court orders that he make the tapes available to Sirica for screening for the Watergate grand jury.

"We had hoped that this kind of solution would end the constitutional crisis," Wright said. "But events over the weekend made it very apparent that it would not."

The "events" to which Wright referred was a furor — including efforts by some congressmen to start impeachment proceedings against Nixon — after he fired Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor.

The House of Representatives today began preliminary inquiries into whether President Nixon should be impeached.

House Speaker Carl Albert sent the judiciary committee all impeachment resolutions. The committee's chairman, Representative Peter Rodino (Dem., N.J.) said: "Events of the past few days leave us with little choice at this time but to move ahead with preparation for impeachment proceedings."

Albert cautioned against any hasty or reckless action.

Rodino described his committee's task as being "the preliminary stage to inquire whether or not there is evidence to establish an impeachable offence."

The Dow Jones industrial average dropped almost 11

Investigators have uncovered a new case of alleged wrong-doing involving Nixon. This time, it involves the dairy industry, and possible campaign fund pay-offs for preferntial legislation.

$180M For Land

EDMONTON (CP) — A land development program that would be attractive to municipalities and remove some of their concerns about the financing of new residential development was suggested by Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford Monday.

Basford said that $180 million is available under existing legislation for land assembly and the new communities program in the next 14 months.

"If we can work together, I believe we would create substantially more publicly-developed serviced land," he told more than 200 delegates representing the federal, provincial and municipal levels of government.

$1 BILLION FUND

Earlier, the municipal delegation to the conference had urged in a brief that a $1-billion community development fund be set up by the federal government for land banking and experimental housing projects.

The municipalities said in a brief Monday that the money would be in addition to current federal spending on existing programs under the National Housing Act.

The municipal group suggested that the federal government could use the money to buy land directly for housing and community development. The land acquisition would have to fit in with provincially-approved municipal plans.

GUIDELINES

Basford proposed that land assembly funds would be applied on a priority basis to public projects adhering to the following guidelines:

—When land is sold or leased, the participating governments would put the profits back into the project—at no cost to the municipality—in land for open space, community facilities and school sites. Any remaining profit would be applied to the capital cost of community service buildings.

—A portion of the land would be made available free of charge for public housing.

—Prices for the sale or leasing of land for modest-income housing would be at, or close to, cost. Prices for more expensive units would be close to market rates.

—Provinces and municipalities would be allowed to defer interest on federal land assembly loans until the land is marketed.

Basford emphasized that the program could be achieved within existing legislation.

"If we are going to be in the land development business, we should be setting the example for the private sector, not simply imitating their methods," Basford said. Hopefully, we will break the financial bottleneck that has restrainecd municipalities from opening up land and establish a style and method of development to which all private developers in the country would be obliged to conform."

He urged delegates to have the appropriate officials at each level of government ex-

LE DUC THO, a member of the North Vietnamese politburo, today rejected the Nobel Peace Prize awarded to him jointly with U.Se State Secretary Henry Kissinger, a Hanoi broadcast said.

In his message to the Nobel committee Tho said: "I feel it impossible to accept the 1973 Nobel Peace Prize" because the United States and the South Vietnamese regime have continued to commit "very serious violations" of the ceasefire agreement and "peace has not been really restored in South Vietnam."

Railmen Start Talks

Premier Barrett told the legislature at 2:15 p.m. that new negotiations began at 11 a.m. today and he hoped the new initiative would bring "an imminent" settlement to the nine-day B.C. Rail strike.

He said he expected to hear results of the new talks by late this afternoon. He would not elaborate on what the new talks involved.

Earlier Barrett sent a telegram asking the men to return by 1 p.m. today, saying "the economic situation in B.C. compels me to make this request of you today." He didn't say what will happen if there was no return to work by 1 p.m.

Asked by reporters this morning if the government planned to introduce back to work legislation today, he said only "no comment."

Norman Farley, chairman of the four-union negotiating committee of 383 men who repair railway equipment, said, "they are not even sure what is the situation created by the strike."

He said B.C. Rail was shut down by a strike in 1966 for three weeks while the present strike has lasted only nine days.

"I haven't found that the public is beefing. They are not hitting the hotlines or the editorials," Farley said from Vancouver.

He said the strikers are "not asking for sympathetic handouts or charitable donations" but over the years the employees had "fallen behind" in wages and it was time to catch up.

Barrett, in his telegram, said "there is no doubt in my mind that your economic situation has been neglected for many years past, however, no new government can make up overnight for many years of neglect."

Mideast Battles Raging Again

Times News Services

Fierce tank and artillery clashes exploded along the Suez Canal today and dog-fights erupted over the Syrian battleground.

The war raged into its 18th day on both fronts after an only partial overnight pause for the precarious Security Council truce designed to halt the combat in place and open the way to negotiations for a permanent peace.

Israel's renewed offensive in Egypt sent spearheads to within 37 miles of Cairo but the Egyptians said only that heavy fighting had broken out and that Israel started it.

Egypt called for an emergency Security Council meeting to discuss what it said were Israeli violations of the fragile ceasefire. Council president Sir Laurence McIntyre of Australia called a midday session at UN headquarters in New York.

Egypt and Israel had accepted the truce appeal worked out by the United States and the Soviet Union and both ordered their armies Monday evening to hold their fire unless fired on.

But Syria kept silent on the UN call, and only hours after it went into effect there were mutual accusations of ceasefire violations by Egyptians and Israelis along the Suez front.

A correspondent for Egypt's Middle East News Agency said the Israeli and Egyptian forces by today were "locked in the most vicious fighting since the outbreak of the war."

Syria charged the Israelis sent about 60 planes in "waves" to bomb civilian targets today north of Damascus and said Israeli planes and cannons hit villages in the eastern foothills of Mount Hermon.

The renewed fighting cast doubt on whether the ceasefire call can bring a quick halt to the fourth Middle East war despite the apparent agreement between U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger and Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev.

Egypt said the Israelis grabbed new positions during the night, particularly in efforts to expand the Israeli foothold on the west bank of the canal.

Meanwhile, should the fighting end, 30 Canadian soldiers are ready to go to the Middle East immediately if they are needed to bolster United Nations truce observer forces there, an armed forces spokesman said Monday in Ottawa.

At the U.N., diplomats worked today on plans for policing any ceasefire, with support growing for use of U.S. and Soviet troops.

The only hitch was China.

Diplomats report increasing backing to suggestions that Moscow and Washington send units to serve side-by-side in an unprecedented tour of duty as truce policemen.

But Chinese ambassador Huang Hua accused the "two superpowers" of seeking to perpetuate a "no peace-no war" situation in the Middle East in their joint ceasefire resolution approved Monday.

It is likely that China will veto any plan to send Soviet and U.S. troops into the Middle East, sources say.

Israel 'On Top'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military analysts expressed the view Monday that Israeli forces hold the upper hand in the Suez Canal area and can trap or destroy a large part of the Egyptian army if the fighting continues for another week.

Officials here estimate the Israelis now hold close to 500 square miles of territory on the Egyptian side of the canal.

But more importantly, these sources said the fast-moving Israeli armored units had cut the only railroad and highway links between Ismailia and Cairo in the central canal area and the sole rail and road link between Cairo and Port Suez on the southern end of the canal.

The Israeli armored units operating on the West Bank have knocked out many of the Russian-supplied surface-to-air missile batteries, thus giving the Israeli air force a fairly clear shot at much of the Egyptian armor left on the East Bank.

Despite the fact that Egyptian forces still hold a roughly five-mile deep beachhead along much of the East Bank, many U.S. military men here feel Israel clearly has gained the edge.

"Strategically," one officer said, "Israel has it all over them."

$1-a-Gallon Gas on Way?

Times News Services

Dollar-a-gallon gasoline in British Columbia is a possibility because of the rising price of world crude oil, B.C. Energy Commission chairman James Rhodes said Monday in Vancouver.

He told the annual convention of B.C. Automotive Dealers Association the price of imported crude oil has risen from between $2 and $3 to above $6 a barrel and could go to $10.

The energy commission's intention "is to assure an adequate supply of petroleum for B.C." Rhodes said, adding it would be no easy task because this province produces only 50 per cent of the petroleum it consumes and there is no evidence of any great amount of undiscovered deposits of oil.

He said the energy commission, in its detailed look at the petroleum industry ordered by the cabinet last week, will examine present and future oil demands and prices, look for measures to guarantee adequate supplies, and for other measures that will assure fair prices.

In Alberta, the government has threatened to take greater control over its shipments of oil to the rest of Canada and the world.

The action, described in the legislature as an Alberta-first policy, would be the latest move in Alberta's fight with the federal government to control its oil resources.

Bill Dickie, provincial minister of mines and minerals, said Monday the move "being looked at in the light of recent events" is an act giving the province the power to determine how much crude oil could be sold outside Alberta.

United States energy adviser John Love, appointed by President Nixon two weeks ago, is meeting Canadian Energy Minister Donald Macdonald today in Ottawa to discuss a growing list of Canada-United States energy problems.

It is the first meeting between the two men and their talks will cover a variety of thorny issues precipitated by changing Canadian energy policies.

The list includes:

—The 40 cents-a-barrel crude oil export tax that annoyed U.S. officials when announced last month without advance consultation.

—Possible cutback in Canadian natural gas exports to protect B.C. consumers from winter shortages.

—Ottawa's proposed extension of the interprovincial pipeline to Montreal. This would reduce Quebec and Atlantic reliance on imported oil from Venezuela and the Middle East and could lead to cutbacks in Canadian oil exports to the U.S.

LIQUOR STORE HOURS CUT

MOOSONEE, Ont. (CP) — The Liquor Control Board of Ontario has announced this community's liquor store will not open Saturdays, following complaints by priests of weekend drunkenness.

Rev. Germaine Villeneuve, a member of the Roman Catholic Oblate Fathers in this James Bay outpost, complained that rowdiness, fighting and property damage have resulted from drunkenness on Saturday nights and Sunday mornings.

MLA BROUSSON QUITS

Brousson, first elected in a 1968 byelection, rose in his place as the house was about to adjourn at 6 p.m. Monday and told his colleagues he is no longer able to continue as both an MLA and a businessman and was therefore resigning.

Premier Barrett said Brousson's decision is "regrettable" but said the new system of governing has caught up with B.C.

Brousson's departure leaves the Liberal party with only four members in the legislature. The NDP government has 38, Social Credit 10 and the Progressive Conservatives 2.

Brousson, whose heating and refrigeration wholesale and distributing business was recently acquired by a larger firm, said he has been finding his business duties and oppor-

Profit Goes 'Missing'

TORONTO (CP) — A survey of five major food chains here has indicated the retail price of beef has dropped only 10 per cent since late August while the wholesale price has decreased about 17 per cent in the same period.

Federal department of agriculture figures show Toronto supermarket chains saw their cost of beef carcasses drop to $82.65 a hundredweight last week from $100.22 Aug. 29.

However, the survey noted the retail weighted average cost of a beef cut dropped only to $1.36 from $1.46 a pound in the same period.

And the Canadian Cattlemen's Association is concerned about the discrepancy.

Charles Gracey, association president, said retail prices were resulting in lower consumption as the number of animals on farms increases.

Supermarket spokesmen say most of the extra margin since August has gone toward restoring profits lost when wholesale beef prices hit record highs last summer.

The government continues to resist changes in the religious objector clause in new labor legislaton and subsequent voting on amendments had the two Conservative members splitting their vote. See Page 14.

Import Duties On Oil Dropped

OTTAWA (CP) — All import duties on gasoline, light heating oils, diesel fuel, aviation fuel and feedstocks for petrochemical industries will be abolished Wednesday, Finance Minister John Turner announced today in the Commons.

"This action is being taken to offset rising prices for petroleum products," the minister said in tabling the ways and means motion that accompanies any tax change.

DST... Energy Saver for B.C.?

Year-round daylight saving time, a fuel-saver during the First and Second World Wars, may offer some relief for B.C. in the face of possible energy shortages.

"That's a very interesting idea," Premier Barrett said Monday, when asked his opinion of the suggestion. He said he would take it up with Resources Minister Bob Williams.

The logic behind permanent summer time is simple: longer hours of daylight would cut the use of electrical energy needed for lighting homes, offices and streets.

Clocks are usually turned ahead in the spring and back again in the fall by cabinet order-in-council. DST is scheduled to end next Sunday.

Opposition members expressed interest in the idea Monday and most said it would be an easy way to conserve fuel.

Bill Bennett (SC—South Okanagan) said he didn't think the hour change would inconvenience anyone, including farmers in his own constituency.

Most farmers are working under lights early in the morning anyway, he said.

Liberal leader David Anderson said it was an excellent idea but would be most effective only if done in consultation with other jurisdictions. The peak load factor is important, he said, and the load should be staggered in relation to Seattle, for example.

The extra hour of daylight has found some support in the U.S. where the transportation department, which enforces
